Barrett Shifts 3 Captains In Move to Chastise One

Richitt Transferred To Remote Precinct For 'Disrespect' as City Head Approves

By Benjamin Bradlee and Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporters

Police Chief Robert J. Barrett yesterday transferred Third Precinct Capt. Anthony Richitt for "failure to carry out his duties and disrespect toward his superior officers."

A veteran of 24 years on the force, Richitt said he would report for duty to the remote Eighth Precinct early this morning.

Richitt's transfer was announced at 12:55 p. m., yesterday, six days after a similar transfer was secretly ordered and abruptly canceled five hours later.

Three Others Transferred

Richitt's transfer caused the reshuffling of three other officers:

Capt. Charles A. J. Sullivan was transferred from command of the Second Precinct to take Richitt's job.

Capt. John E. Fondahl was transferred from command of the Eighth Precinct to special duty at headquarters. He is expected to be named temporary director of the newly organized civilian defense program for the District.

Lieut. Albert B. Clark was appointed acting captain and transferred from the Thirteenth Precinct to take command of the Second Precinct.

The shakeup ordered yesterday paralleled the transfers ordered and rescinded February 23, except that Fondahl was scheduled then to take over the Second Precinct instead of Clark.

Young Explains Action

Cancellation of those transfers reportedly came after Richitt had requested intervention from the White House, which lies in the Third Precinct. A White House source denied any such intervention.

Richitt's transfer yesterday was backed up by a special communique from Commissioner John Russell Young, who said he had approved the transfer after examining a special "summary of complaints" against Richitt.

Both Barrett and Young refused to give reporters details of how Richitt allegedly failed to carry out his duties and showed disrespect.

Richitt said only that he wants to tell his side of the story under oath. Otherwise, he said, he had no comment at this time.

The House District subcommittee investigating crime in Washington is considering giving Richitt the opportunity he wants, it was learned last night.

Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.), chairman of the crime inquiry, said last night "if there is anything involved in his transfer which comes under the jurisdiction

Judge Barse Indorses Law Council Plan

Crime Investigators Study Laxity of Court Penalties

Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court yesterday gave warm indorsement to creation of a District council on law enforcement.

Judge Barse told the House District Crime Inquiry Committee that he would be willing to devote some of his own time and effort to fostering the proposed council. He said he felt his colleagues would welcome an opportunity to take part in the work of such a council.

The council idea was advanced during an afternoon hearing by Hyman I. Fischbach, committee counsel.

Fischbach suggested that the council on law enforcement would have two major functions—coordinate efforts of existing law enforcement agencies, and "modernize" the District laws dealing with crime.

Law Modernization

Suggestions for modernizing local laws, with emphasis on sharp increases in the severity of penalties, were brought out in Fischbach's quizzing of Clark F. King, who is in charge of the criminal division of the Corporation Counsel's office.

King said District penalties for vagrancy are too light. The maximum now is $300 or 90 days, not both. He said that a couple of days ago, the police found a man lurking in an alley behind a grocery. The man had a house-breaking record, no explanation for being where he was, and had with him a screwdriver, chisel, hammer, and other tools.

"We all knew he was in the alley to break into the store," said King. "Yet all we could do is charge him with vagrancy, a misdemeanor, with the maximum penalty $300 or 90 days."

Obsolete Health Penalties

He said District penalties for health violations date from the period 1890 to 1910 and are obsolete. He said the top penalty for running an unclean bakery is $25.

King said that if penalties on offenses like vagrancy, disorderly conduct, and health violations are increased, an accompanying change should be made in the law that says when a jury trial can be demanded. He said that the right of trial by jury in Municipal Court should be limited to cases in which it is guaranteed by the Constitution.

As the law now stands, King said, a jury trial can be demanded not only when the Constitution guarantees it, but also where the penalty exceeds $300 fine. He urged ending the penalty basis for getting a jury trial. If this were done, he said, it would eliminate jury trials for such offenses as viola-

Bonus Passed By Senate In Maryland

$125 Million Bill Voted by 19 to 9; Carries No Specific Financing Provision

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 1.—The controversial bonus bill, benefiting veterans of both World Wars, passed the Maryland Senate tonight by a 19-9 vote.

How much further it will get seems to depend on whether the House, in its consideration of the bill, amends it to include some financing provisions for the 125 million dollar proposal.

If such action is not taken, the measure faces sure veto from Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., who warned assemblymen Tuesday that he would refuse to sign any proposal to use sales tax funds already dedicated for other purposes to finance the bonus.

Liquor Levy Sought

Senator Harry T. Phoebus of Somerset County, sponsor of the bill, said before tonight's session that he would try to substitute a penny liquor tax for a sales tax increase when the bill comes before the House.

Whether assemblymen who are backing the bonus would prefer Senator Phoebus's tax to the one-cent sales tax hike which is already a part of the 100-million-dollar House bonus bill is unknown.

Administration leaders seemed very dubious that either bonus bill would come up for House action tonight.

When the Senate bonus bill came up for action by that body tonight, there was no comment from either side on its merit. The vote was one of a number taken on a long list of measures up for third reading.

Provisions Outlined

As originally introduced, both bonus bills would apply to any person on active duty in the United States armed forces from September 6, 1940 to September 3, 1945 who was a resident of Maryland for at least six months prior to his entrance in the service. The veteran must have been honorably discharged, retired, furloughed to a reserve or be still on active duty.

The bill would pay to such persons $15 per month or major fraction for every month of service outside the continental limits of the United States and $10 per month of service within the continental limits of the United States.

It sets up $500 as a maximum bonus payment, exempts work performed as a civilian, rules out members of the merchant marine, or those persons who have received a bonus from another state. It also provides that nearest of kin may receive the bonus if the veteran is dead.

The original House bill called for a 100-million-dollar bonus

March Comes in Mildly, But Colder Is Forecast Today

March blew mildly into the Greater Washington area yesterday but fair, windy and much colder is forecast for today.

From a low of 44 degrees at 9 a. m. the mercury rose to 53 at 12:45 p. m.

The high today is expected to be in the low 30s.

The Weather Bureau in its first experimental extended forecast for the entire month, said "the outlook for March calls for colder than normal weather from the Mississippi River eastward, with the greatest departure from normal in the New England and Middle Atlantic States."

"Over the eastern seaboard from Washington, D. C., to Florida, temperatures are expected to average as cold, or even slightly colder than they did in February. Precipitation is expected to be normal or below normal."

Coal Dealers' Bins Bare in Va. Suburbs

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Alexandria and Arlington County dealers yesterday hit bottom in their coal bins and several Prince Georges and Montgomery County retailers said they would be in the same fix by Friday.

In Washington, dealers were having trouble supplying both hard and soft coal. "It's a difficult situation," Patrick A. Deck, chairman of the coal division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, observed.

He said some dealers who were short were borrowing from others. The soft-coal shortage is cutting into the hard-coal supply, below normal anyway because of a three-day work week, Deck said. Some large bituminous users are shifting to hard coal, he said.

In Alexandria, Francis H. Fannon, chairman of the Alexandria Emergency Coal Committee, said last night "there is no coal in any dealer bins in the city."

He added that "not more than a couple of cars will be received from the State Emergency Fuel Commission by the end of the week." This is expected to be poor quality coal, Fannon said.

UMW Trial Closes; Judge Ponders Case

Keech Unable to Say When He Will Decide On Contempt Charges

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

After three days of trial, District Court Judge Richmond B. Keech yesterday took under advisement the contempt charges against the United Mine Workers for failure to end the strike of 370,000 soft coal miners.

The jurist told a reporter he could not say when he would come up with a decision in the case, but Government attorneys speculated that a ruling might be made today.

The Government summed up its case with the argument that the UMW's actions toward carrying out the antistrike injunction of February 11 were but a "sham and pretense." The union contended that it had done virtually everything in its power, excepting "revoke all charters" of its affiliated locals, to get the strikers to return to work in compliance with the court's order.

There were two other major developments on the coal front yesterday, as the miners continued to stay away from the pits, and the worsening coal shortage spread a slow paralysis through the Nation's industrial and community life:

1. Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson ordered all military installations to reduce coal consumption to the "bare minimum" and to distribute surplus supplies to the State governments for emergency civilian use.

2. Coal contract negotiations, ordered by the Federal Court along

House Group Asks Review Of War Plan

New Top-Level Study of A-Bomb 'Retaliation' Thesis Urged in Report

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Top-level reconsideration of the Nation's basic strategy—which now places major reliance on retaliatory atom bombing of an enemy's industrial centers—was urged yesterday by the House Armed Services Committee.

Reporting on its investigation of the so-called "Navy revolt" on Capitol Hill last fall, the committee partially sided with the admirals on this and other points at issue during the hearings.

They called upon the National Security Council, headed by President Truman, to restudy the question of whether strategic A-bombing plans are in keeping with our "national objectives" and should be relied upon to the present extent. Opposition to such strategy had been a major plank in the "admirals' case."

Backs Air Force on B-36

The committee's finding on the Navy's charges against the B-36 bomber, however, was that as the Air Force has the primary responsibility for strategic bombing, the Nation must rely on its leaders as to the best weapon for carrying it out.

It came to the same conclusion on the question of the cancellation of the Navy's 65,000-ton aircraft carrier United States, holding that the admirals were the best judges of what is needed in naval weapons, but beyond sharp criticism of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson for the "manner" in which the cancellation was handled, took no firm stand in this controversy.

Because of the "pressure of other shipbuilding programs" and existing budget limits, said the group, it decided to "withhold further action for the present."

Much of the rest of the 30,000-page report was along the same lines—a lengthy discussion of the pros and cons of criticism, concession that there might be something to it, and then reference of the issue to other agencies for settlement.

Rebukes Johnson, Matthews

On two points, however, the committee took a firm stand. It rebuked Johnson and Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews for firing Admiral Louis E. Denfeld as chief of naval operations, and proposed legislation to revamp the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Denfeld's ouster was described as a "reprisal" against him for his testimony, in violation of promises given to the committee by Johnson and Matthews. They also declared that his removal violated a Unification Act proviso "written specifically to prevent actions of this nature."

A minority of eight members—all Democrats—objected to this recommendation, while a different minority of 10 wanted to go further and take action against Matthews. The rest of the report was approved unanimously. Chair-

Atlantic Council Talks On A-Peace Strategy Proposed by McMahon

Acheson Sees Talks Needed

Atlantic Pact Nations Planning Parley in Spring, London Says

London, March 1 (AP).—The foreign ministers of the 12 Atlantic Pact nations plan to meet this spring, probably in Europe, the British Foreign Office said today.

A spokesman said the meeting of "The Council of the North Atlantic Pact" might give the United States, British and French foreign ministers an opportunity to hold special Big Three meetings.

The spokesman said no date was set for the meeting, which may be held in April or May. The council held its first meeting last April 4, when the pact was signed in Washington.

The spokesman said this spring's meeting might be in the capital of one of the smaller countries, such as Belgium or Holland, and that the council would discuss the working of the pact in its first year and future plans.

The nations are the United States, Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, Canada, Italy, Portugal, Iceland, Norway and Sweden.

Acheson Says Parley May Well Be Needed

Secretary Acheson said yesterday a meeting of Western foreign ministers might well be needed in the spring, although he had reached no conclusion on it as yet.

He indicated he was thinking of a possible meeting of American, British and French foreign ministers rather than a bigger meeting of all the foreign ministers whose governments signed the North Atlantic Treaty.

He also said he and his advisers had often discussed the possibility of using Article 2 of the treaty.

Another $20 Million

Tito Is Given New U. S. Loan After Protesting Slowness

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia got another 20-million-dollar American loan yesterday after complaining bitterly that the United States was too slow in helping him.

The Export-Import Bank announced that the new loan would be spent for American raw materials, lubricants, chemicals and spare parts, including ball bearings for factory and farm machinery supplied by UNRRA at the end of the war.

Without the new loan, Bank Chairman Herbert E. Gaston said, "severe hardship would be caused" to the Yugoslav economy. Tito's quarrel with the Kremlin has cut off his country from its former markets and sources of supply in eastern Europe, and has compelled him to switch the Yugoslav economy toward the West.

American policy has aimed at helping him to make the switch, and also at widening his breach with Moscow. The Export-Import Bank, a United States Government agency, granted him one 20-million-dollar loan last September for mining machinery and industrial equipment.

But Tito has been dissatisfied, especially since a 25-million-dollar application to the World Bank has hung fire for months with no prospect of quick action.

In two harsh speeches recently Tito virtually accused the United States of stalling with its economic

House Passes Bill to Create Science Body

Any Foreigner Linked With Foundation Faces Check by FBI

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Studded with additional security safeguards, the Administration's national science foundation bill designed to foster public and private research in basic science yesterday passed the House, 247 to 125.

An effort to recommit the key point in the Truman program failed 240 to 134. The bill now returns to the Senate, which passed companion legislation last year.

Just before passage, the House further tightened the already stringent security provisions to cover any possible repetition of Britain's Klaus Fuchs case in the new science setup.

Amendment by Flood

An amendment by Representative Daniel J. Flood (D., Pa.) required any foreign national associated with the foundation to have a special FBI test regardless of whether he had passed a check by his own government.

Another by Representative James G. Fulton (D., Tenn.) stipulates that the Secretary of Defense must approve regulations drawn by the foundation's executive committee covering security classification of information or property having military significance.

Another amendment by Fulton requires approval by the Secretary of State before the foundation can contract with organizations or individuals in foreign countries or cooperate in international scientific research activities.

The added safeguards followed voice vote. House approval on Tuesday of an individual FBI loyalty check on every employe of the proposed agency, as well as

Russia Is Challenged To Play Host to U.N. Assembly to Consider Resulting Program

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) proposed yesterday an immediate convening of the Atlantic Council—the foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Pact nations—to formulate "a grand strategy" for atomic peace.

In a major and dramatic Senate speech, McMahon then challenged Russia to discuss that new "concrete peace program" in Moscow itself, by being host to a meeting of the United Nations General Assembly.

The Western nations should insist, he continued, that the proceedings of such a discussion be broadcast throughout the world, including Russia.

"If the Soviet rulers permit a real Town Meeting of the World in their Moscow citadel," McMahon said, "then we may truly hope for fruitful talks. If they dare not entertain the General Assembly, all the free world will know the meaning of such a refusal."

"Testimony so eloquent may not be lost even on the Russian people."

Receives Congratulations

Although only a dozen or so Senators were on the floor at the time, many of them recognized McMahon's speech as a major pronouncement. Several Senators rose at once to give him warm congratulations.

The chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy argued that the hydrogen and atomic bomb race was putting America in a "greater emergency" today than it had ever faced, even during the last war.

Yet, he said, "we have adopted no measures remotely equal in scope and daring to those used for the lesser emergency of the last war."

Further, he noted, the rest of the free world shares this crisis with us. The intelligent thing to do, therefore, is to seek a common approach for solution with the other Western nations.

We sought the free world's help in time of war, McMahon argued. "Must we not now seek its help for peace? Does not a decent sense of humility toward the wisdom and experience of our allies decree that we now take common counsel?"

The North Atlantic Pact, and its policy-making body, the Atlantic Council, is the agency that should now agree on a grand strategy

French Reds Join Wine Bloc Seeking Ban on Coca-Cola

Paris, March 1 (U.P.).—Communist members of the National Assembly joined forces with the wine-growing bloc tonight to map a finish fight to ban Coca-Cola from France.

The Communists consider the popular American drink an agent of American imperialism. The wine growers consider Coca-Cola bad for their business. The whole issue threatens a bitter parliamentary fight and possible Marshall Plan repercussions.

At the same time high medical authorities, who seldom, it is reported, touch anything but wine, prepared to sip a few soft drinks to find out if they would be harmful to Frenchmen.

Deputy Antonin Gros said he would introduce a bill to prohibit the use, sale or manufacture of Coca-Cola in France.

The Communists long have fought Coca-Cola in France. Now that it's sold in cafes, bars and retail stores in the bigger French cities they are determined not to let it gain in popularity.

Last night the anti-soft drink bloc in the Assembly voted to allow the public health minister to ban any drink containing harmful properties.

Laborites Hint They Will Ease Up On Nationalizing

London, March 1. (NYHT)—Prime Minister Clement Attlee, in a private speech to Labor members of the new Parliament today, indicated the Labor Government would limit its legislative program to non-controversial measures because of its slim majority of seven—smallest any British Government has had for 100 years.

He told his supporters the government would "do all that it felt necessary in the interests of the country." His remarks were interpreted as meaning the nationalization program will be dropped at least until the next election.

Attlee also appealed for strict party discipline and loyalty.

The meeting was held just before Parliament met for the traditional ceremony of electing the Speaker of the House of Commons. As was known beforehand, Col. Douglas Clifton Brown was reelected.

House Labor Unit Votes to Bar FSA From Part in School Aid

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The House Labor Committee yesterday refused to approve any bill for Federal aid to education unless President Truman promises the Federal Security Agency will keep its hands off the Nation's schools.

A resolution introduced by Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.) asserting that intent was passed by a vote of 13 to 11. Kearns is a former school superintendent.

The committee also voted to take up the Senate-passed Federal Aid to Education Bill as a basis of compromise in the event it eventually decides to report out a measure which it has blocked for more than a year. The Senate bill, however, will be open for amendments in the committee before any final action is taken. Under the Senate measure the issue of whether Federal funds should be used to aid parochial and other sectarian schools is left strictly up to the States.

Adoption of the Kearns resolution was regarded as a direct slap at Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, and the agency itself.

It was widely believed its acceptance by the committee would put President Truman in an embarrassing position, and at the same time raise the question of a separate department of education to take the Office of Education out of FSA and beyond control by Ewing.

The Kearns resolution said the committee has no assurance that Commissioner of Education Earl J. McGrath will have "sole jurisdiction" of Federal aid "without interference from the Administrator of the Federal Security Agency or any of his administrative assistants."

The resolution said the committee will not report bills pertaining to Federal aid to schools until the President submits a statement "clarifying the authority and redefining the duties of the United States Commission of Education . . . and that the President inform the Federal Security Administrator of this clarification."

The Kearns resolution, Lesinski said, was stopped after committee members read a "sex education" pamphlet entitled "Your Child From 6 to 12," issued by the Federal Security Agency and bearing Ewing's name as administrator.

The pamphlet, members said, was not written by Ewing but was issued by the Children's Bureau of FSA.

Lesinski said the committee does not want sex education forced on the public schools, nor does it want an aid bill in which a non-professional educator can determine educational policy.

The Children's Bureau later said in a formal state . . . that the bulletin's only aim is to help parents meet the "needs of their children."

In the event the desired assurance is not forthcoming from President Truman, Lesinski stated, the committee itself can write specific safeguards to achieve its purpose in the language of any bill it reports.

Court Calls Scientist 'Ingrate'

A-Spy Fuchs Gets 14 Years, Gives 'Atoning' Information

London, March 1. (AP)—Dr. Klaus Fuchs, Jekyll-Hyde wizard of science, whispered "Guilty" today and was given the maximum sentence of 14 years in prison for betraying American and British atomic secrets to Soviet Russia. His trial lasted only 90 minutes.

Before he left the prisoner's dock in Old Bailey Criminal Court, the 38-year-old German-born Communist admitted having given information to the Russian agents he dealt with in Britain and the United States—thus presumably touching off a great international spy hunt.

At the hearing, Fuchs was upbraided by the Lord Chief Justice of England, Lord Goddard, for committing the "grossest treachery" and doing "irreparable and incalculable harm both to this land and the United States of America."

The scarlet-robed justice told the prisoner he had fallen to the "depths of self-deception," endangered British and American friendship and "imperiled the right of asylum which this country has hitherto extended to political refugees."

"Dare we now give shelter to political refugees who may be followers of this pernicious creed who well may disguise themselves and bite the hand that feeds them?" he asked.

Before turning away from the dock, Fuchs said meekly he had given the authorities certain facts "to atone" for his crimes.

[It was brought out in his trial, according to the United Press, that Fuchs was known to British security agents as a Communist but was allowed to work on secret projects because of his anti-Nazi record in Germany.—Editor's note.]

Sir Hartley Shawcross, Britain's Attorney General who appeared as prosecutor, said Fuchs related

Capt. Fondahl Proposed

Police Official Due to Head Civil Defense Setup at Start

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The District Commissioners are expected today to name Police Capt. John E. Fondahl temporary director of the District's new civil defense program.

His name was submitted to Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday by Police Supt. Robert J. Barrett after Barrett had transferred four ranking officers. The order shifted Fondahl from his Eighth Precinct command to special duty at police headquarters.

Fondahl served as a lieutenant colonel with the Fourth Marine Division in World War II. For the past three years he has commanded the Fifth Infantry Battalion in the Marine Corps Reserve program here. Last summer he was promoted to full colonel in the reserves.

He would serve in the civil defense post, under present plans, only until a full-time director is named.

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said the Commissioners will seek between $30,000 and $40,000 for a director and staff in a deficiency appropriation bill which will go to Congress this month.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee yesterday "unconditionally indorsed" the Commissioners' plans for a civil defense setup here.

The Commissioners have scheduled a meeting Friday with about 30 key District officials and citizen representatives for initial discussions of civil defense problems. Assistant Engineer Commissioner Thomas J. Hayes, 3d, said physicians, representatives of railroads, utilities and the like, have been invited.

moral turpitude, and some other offenses, including reckless driving.

King declared the present $25 fine, maximum penalty for disorderly conduct, is an ineffective barrier to persons bent on creating some "despicable disturbance," like starting a street fight with a person of another race.

He said the reckless driving penalty, $250, or 90 days, should be increased. He said the practice is to charge a reckless driver with all the separate traffic violations involved in his recklessness to get a larger penalty.

King said that he and his four assistants handled 50,000 cases last year. They have no stenographic or filing help, and no adequate law library. He said it was normal for all the staff to work at home at least one night a week to prepare briefs. He and one assistant can type, the others use the "hunt and peck" system. He said all members of the office have the right to carry on private practice, but none has the time. His own salary, he said, comes to $185 "take-home pay" every two weeks; his assistants get less.

Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of Metropolitan Police detectives, and J. Warren Wilson, assistant United States Attorney, were called together to the witness table to discuss two police cases. Testifying with Murray was Precinct Detective Andrew J. Gerber of the Fifth Precinct.

The first case raised the question why a delicatessen operator, charged with receiving stolen property—he bought a case of cigarettes, an electric fan, and several radios from a 15-year-old boy—wound up in Municipal Court paying $50 on a plea of guilty to a charge of petty larceny.

Wilson said that from his recollection, the facts had left a doubt whether it could be proved the defendant had a guilty knowledge that the property had been stolen. He said the evidence appeared to fall short of what is needed to indict on the charge of receiving stolen property. But, he added, "Many times we have a firm conviction that the person is guilty but lack the evidence to prove it, and the technical charge of petty larceny was a left-handed way of teaching this man a lesson."

Witness Says Patient Died Before Sander Injected Air

Manchester, N. H., March 1 (AP).—Dr. Hermann N. Sander's cancer-wasted patient was dead—in the words of another doctor—before Sander injected air into her veins.

Chief Defense Counsel Louis E. Wyman sprung a surprise today by offering this evidence while one of the prosecution's key medical witnesses was on the stand in the so-called "mercy killing" trial.

Dr. Sander is accused of first degree murder on charges he killed Mrs. Abbie Borroto, 59-year-old housewife, by injecting 40 cubic centimeters of air into her veins as she lay dying.

Dr. Albert Snay, 34, another doctor on the staff of Hillsboro County Hospital, said in a statement he examined Mrs. Borroto just minutes before Sander arrived at her bedside and found:

1. She had no pulse—"her skin was cold and clammy."

2. "I touched her left eyeball. There was no corneal reflex."

3. There was no sign of movement at the apex (the apex is that part of the heart where every beat starts.)

4. "I then applied a stethoscope to her chest and heard no heart sound."

5. "There were barely perceptible muscular twitchings of her face and upper extremities."

Dr. Snay said in his statement he "concluded then she was dead and turned to leave"—meeting Dr. Sander at the threshold of the woman's bedroom.

Earlier, County Medical Referee Dr. Robert E. Biron read the hospital records of the Borroto case previously introduced and saying ". . . Patient given 10 ccs of air repeated four times and expired 10 minutes after this was started."

Dr. Biron admitted under cross-examination that a physician might make a mistake in judging whether a patient is alive or dead.

Dr. Ralph E. Miller, State pathologist, testified on direct examination that it would be impossible in an autopsy to show air after a body was embalmed.

Attorney General William L. Phinney asked whether 40 ccs of air could have caused Mrs. Borroto's death assuming she was given the injections.

"It is my opinion under these circumstances that the cause of death would be pulmonary air embolism," was the reply.

Under cross-examination, Dr. Miller conceded that in answering the prosecutor's hypothetical question he assumed the patient had died "after" the injections.

Dr. Miller said he "found no immediate cause of death" in the autopsy that was performed on Mrs. Borroto's body at the request of defense counsel.

$500 Reward Offered for Man Who Led Warring Bandits

Sidney Stromberg, bulky out-of-town character, was named yesterday by police as leader of the bandit trio that last month robbed Emmitt Warring, former numbers czar.

In 6000 circulars sent out to police departments and law enforcement agencies throughout the country, Washington police offered $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Stromberg and his confederates.

Stromberg, the circulars said, uses the alias of Sidney Max and is well known in Lancaster, Reading, Harrisburg, Media, Wilkes-Barre and Philadelphia, Pa., and New York City.

He was described as 32, 6 feet, 230 pounds, large build, brown eyes, brown hair and medium dark complexion. "Usually a very neat dresser," said the circulars.

This was the first break announced by police in a series of holdups in recent months in which District gambling figures have been the victims.

Emmitt Warring, who built up a two-million-dollar-a-year numbers racket in Washington in the 1930s and then saw it crumble when Federal tax agents got on his trail, was held up January 9 in his home at 3900 Macomb st. nw.

Describing Warring as a "reputed gambler," this is the official police version of what happened in the Warring home last January, as related in the circulars:

Three men entered the home at 3 p. m. by the ruse of delivering a crate of oranges and all drew pistols.

They severely beat and bound "one complainant" (William Cady, a brother-in-law of Warring) and took $900 from his pockets.

They also bound the maid, and then waited until about 5:30 p. m. when Warring returned home. He was assaulted and the bandits took $1500 in cash from his pockets and a six and a half carat solitaire diamond ring from his finger.

Then Warring was forced to open his wall safe from which $20,000 was taken. The thugs bound and gagged Warring before departing.

One of the men, it was said, may use the name "Arthur Miller," and they may be traveling in a 1949 green two-door Chrysler Sedan with Pennsylvania tags 511CA or 49ZH2.

SIDNEY STROMBERG

$500 for his capture

"Use caution, as these men are armed and considered dangerous," the circulars warn.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, Superintendent of Police, said $300 of the $500 reward offered is Police Department money. The rest, he said, is from "the other side." He would not amplify this.

Presumably, Washington detectives would also like to question Stromberg and his pals about other "heists" of local gamblers.

Robert (Ryebread) Shulman is reported to have lost $17,000 when gunmen knocked off a floating dice game in Northeast Washington last November.

Johnny Williams, numbers racket figure, was taken for an amount between $5000 and $10,000 when gunmen invaded his home shortly before Christmas.

Bill to Modify Virginia 'Slot' Ban Restudied

Richmond, March 1—A bill to modify Virginia's rigid slot machine ban went back to the Senate General Laws Committee today for further consideraion and certain death.

The measure, introduced by Senator Frank P. Burton of Patrick, had been reported by the committee to the Senate before members "realized its implications," in the words of one.

It would exempt from the ban coin-operated pinball machines with "free play" features and used for amusement only.

Before it was considered, Burton relinquished an attempt to have enforcement of the law transferred from the ABC board to local governing bodies.

Senator Benjamin T. Pitts, of Fredericksburg, a co-patron on the modified bill, said today it "hasn't a chance" of passing the Senate, even if it is reported again by the committee.

3 Police Captains Transferred as Richitt Is Chastised

of this committee, we will go into it."

In the official explanation of the Richitt transfer, Commissioner Young said that Barrett had the authority to transfer men without approval of the Commissioners.

"As a matter of policy, however, it has been the custom for Barrett to discuss with me assignments of men in important positions. On February 23, Barrett and special assistant corporation counsel Daniel N. Maher discussed with me the proposed transfer of Rickett" Young said. Maher has been acting as liaison man between the Police Department and the Congressional crime inquiry.

Maher's Report Later

"Major Barrett orally stated his reasons for the transfer, which included complaints of his superior officers of failure to carry out his duties and disrespect toward his superior officers.

"I gave my tentative approval to the transfer," the Young statement continued, "and directed Maher to prepare a summary of the complaints and to support the summary by the written statements of Captain Richitt's superiors. On the evening of February 23 I learned the transfer order had been issued. I had not at that time received Maher's report and the transfer order was rescinded." Young did not say whether he had rescinded the order personally.

"On Saturday, February 25, Maher submitted his report to me. I have reviewed the report and my judgment is that Major Barrett was amply justified in this action; and also that the proposed action was in the best interests of the police department."

Maher Declines Comment

When asked for specific complaints against Richitt, Maher said "I can't say anything about it."

The Young statement concluded: "The matter of any future disciplinary action will be left entirely in the hands of Major Barrett."

The transfer was ordered by Barrett a few minutes after Young's statement was released.

Richitt said he had not seen a copy of the Young statement. He said he had not been informed that Maher was preparing a summary of complaints against him.

Richitt, who is 46 and lives at 512 Somerset pl. nw., has been a uniformed man since he joined the force in 1925. He has received 10 commendations. Last fall he and Barrett accompanied President Truman on his vacation to Key West. The White House said the pair traveled in the press plane at their own expense. He returned several days after Barrett. Richitt was at one time chief of the Police Department's team of motorcycle stunt riders. He is married and has two children, including a son who attended the Naval Academy.

Sullivan a Bostonian

Sullivan took over the Second Precinct exactly two months ago. The job is considered one of the department's toughest. Part of the precinct, Thomas Circle, has been called "one of the worst crime centers in Washington" by District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff. Sullivan is a native of Boston "and proud of it." He has served on the Capitol detail and spent more than 10 years in the Navy and Coast Guard. He is married and lives at 1006 Urell pl. ne.

Fondahl, a former Marine lieutenant-colonel, is the department's senior captain, a native of Minnesota. He lives at 4708 Sedgwick st. nw. He is a graduate of the FBI academy and has spent much of his years on the police force with traffic, including prohibition bootleg chases. Details of his new civilian defense job have not been established.

Lieutenant Clark, the department's senior lieutenant, has been a precinct officer for most of his 26 years as a policeman. He has been commended 21 times. He is unmarried and lives at 1315 Belmont st. nw.

Argentine Bakeries To Close Shops Today

Buenos Aires, Argentina, March 1 (U.P.)—Bakery owners voted today to close their shops, effective at dawn Thursday.

The closing poses another serious problem for housewives already beset by a lack of milk and dairy products due to a milk handlers strike, now in its fourth week. Bakers contend that higher wages, ordered paid to workers, would bankrupt them.

Million Dollar Blaze Destroys Spokane Hotel

Spokane, Wash., March 1 (AP).—Origin of a fire that hollowed out the 200-room Ridpath Hotel was still undetermined tonight.

Flames swept the 30-year-old hotel early today. An unofficial estimate placed the damage at one million dollars.

None of the estimated 250 guests was reported missing.

Of eight firemen overcome by smoke or injured, four were still in the hospital tonight. None was in a serious condition.

Woman Held In Midnight Deaths of 5

Cairo, Ga., March 1 (U.P.)—Officers charged a hysterical woman today with the slaughter of her three children, her preacher husband and a neighbor in a midnight rampage with an ax, icepick, razor and shotgun.

The battered bodies were found in two adjoining houses at dawn after the mother, Mrs. Hattie Mae Turner, 32, reported they had been attacked by an "intruder."

But the woman was arrested when police saw her nightgown was bloodsoaked, front and back, and heard her give conflicting stories of what happened.

The victims were:

Jim Turner, 76-year-old missionary Baptist minister; the three children, Jimmie Lou, 10, Bobbie Joe, 4, both girls, and J. P. Turner, 8, and John H. Arline, 50, who lived next door.

Truman to Release Some Loyalty Files

NYHT News Service

President Truman has decided to make State Department loyalty files available to the Senate subcommittee investigating alleged presence of Communists in the department in cases where the information is necessary to establish the proof or falsity of the charges.

This decision, revealed by a competent source, reverses a stand the President has maintained adamantly for two years in refusing to give congressional committees access to loyalty files.

It is understood that Mr. Truman does not intend that it shall serve as a precedent in the future, but that he has decided upon it in this case because of the serious national issue raised by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), in charging that 81 Communists now hold or have held State Department positions.

The Senate voted an investigation into these charges last week. The inquiry will be conducted by a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee headed by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.). It's first public hearing will be at 10:30 a. m. next Wednesday.

Under no circumstances, it was indicated would the president permit the loyalty files to be made public.

Senator Tydings said yesterday he has not asked to see any of the files and that he does not yet know what files the subcommittee might desire.

Probers Brand Jobless Teacher As Spy for Soviet in Mid-30s

NYHT News Service

House spy hunters yesterday charged an unemployed school teacher with being active in the Russian intelligence service during the same period in the middle 1930's in which Alger Hiss has been accused of passing State Department secrets to the Communists.

John L. Sherman, 54, a social science instructor, balked at attempts of members of a House un-American Activities subcommittee to get his story at a hearing yesterday, by refusing to answer questions on grounds the replies might tend to incriminate him. The subcommittee is considering recommending that he be cited for contempt of Congress.

He declined to say whether he had been a member of the Red army intelligence service, but Louis J. Russell, committee investigator, told the hearing that other witnesses had linked Sherman with that type of espionage activity.

Declines to Answer

Sherman declined to say whether he knew Hiss or Whittaker Chambers, admitted former Communist espionage agent whose testimony resulted in the conviction of Hiss on a perjury charge. The former school teacher did assert that " I would consider it a great privilege to know Mr. Hiss."

At one point in the hearings, Sherman asserted that all the questioning was part of a pattern leading to a "frame-up." He asserted that the "frame-up" was the work of a disordered mind and, in an obvious reference to the Hiss case, he added: "Already destroyed is the reputation of one fine American."

Sherman refused to say whether he had ever been to Tokyo or Moscow. He also declined to say whether he had applied for a passport under the name of Charles Francis Chase, and he wouldn't identify a picture on the face of the passport application as his.

Testimony Read

As the questioning went on, previous testimony of Chambers linking Sherman with the heart of Communist espionage activities in this country was read into the record. A portion of Chambers' testimony told of arranging for Sherman to go to Toyko to head a Soviet underground group.

Science Foundation Bill Voted on all individuals awarded foundation scholarships.

Prompted by Fuchs Case

Representative Flood said the additional check on foreign nationals having contact with the agency was prompted by the betrayal of atomic secrets obtained here by Dr. Fuchs, sentenced yesterday in London to 14 years in prison.

Flood said his amendment provides:

"No person (who is) a national of a foreign government shall be associated in any way whatsoever with the foundation unless and until the Federal Bureau of Investigation, irrespective of any investigation made by the Government of such person, shall have investigated such person and reported to the foundation that such person is not and has not at any time been a member of any organization that teaches or advocates the overthrow of our Government by force or violence."

Add 1 Science—Page one

The FBI loyalty check noted Tuesday on individuals employed by or receiving scholarships from the commission, tightest ever imposed on a Federal agency, were sponsored by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.).

Federation Asks Defeat

The Federation of American Scientists last night called for defeat of the bill unless the Smith and Flood amendments are removed in conference. The federation said basic research such as the foundation will foster does not involve access to secrets.

"The United States desperately needs a National Science foundation, but its effectiveness will depending upon the enthusiastic cooperation of scientists," the federation said in a statement.

"Requirements such as imposed by the Smith amendment are unnecessary except in secret research. They are repugnant because they violate a fundamental principal of science—that research must not be subject to political qualification."

Provisions of Measure

The bill authorizes $500,000 to set up a 24-member National Science board, with a $15,000-a-year director, appointed by the President and approved by the Senate. After June 30, 1951, up to 15 million dollars would be made available to the foundation annually to promote basic research in all scientific fields.

The foundation would correlate scientific programs undertaken by individuals and by public and private research groups, including programs of Federal agencies. It would grant scientific scholarships and underwrite research in this country and in some instances abroad.

Brother Identifies Writing As Judith Coplon's at Trial

New York, March 1 (AP).—The brother of Judith Coplon, called as a prosecution witness, today identified as her own the handwriting on papers found in her handbag when she was arrested.

The brother, Bertram, was asked only one question by John M. Kelley, jr., special assistant to the United States Attorney General.

"Can you identify the handwriting on these papers?" Kelley asked as he handed the witness two papers previously identified as taken from the former Government girl's handbag. The Government previously had identified some of the papers as excerpts of FBI reports.

"They are the handwriting of my sister," Coplon replied.

The defense did not cross-examine.

Kelley then was granted a recess until Thursday, when he said he expected to place the last two Government witnesses on the stand.

Earlier, Federal Judge Sylvester A. Ryan denied a motion for a mistrial on behalf of Miss Coplon, on trial on charges of espionage conspiracy.

Kimball Host to Press Women Listed as 'Underprivileged'

The Washington Post

NEWSLADIES' NIGHT—Dan A. Kimball, Undersecretary of Navy, who gave a party at the Carlton Hotel last night for the "underprivileged newspaperwomen of Washington," is joined by two of the ladies of the press in front of his 54th birthday anniversary cake. They are May Craig (left), Washington correspondent for a string of Maine newspapers; and Ruth Montgomery of the New York Daily News. Kimball considers the news gals "underprivileged" because they are barred from the White House correspondents' stag affairs

A flood of brilliantly festooned neckties, some 40 in number, last night descended on Undersecretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball at his dinner in honor of the "underprivileged ladies of the White House Correspondents Association."

The dinner was arranged by Kimball on his fifty-fourth birthday as a means of compensating Capital newspaperwomen who are barred from next Saturday's annual dinner of the White House correspondents, always a stag affair attended by the President of the United States. Kimball's dinner was given at the Carlton Hotel.

Kimball's invitation said:

"The merits or demerits, the complexities or differences of opinion, which attach to their debarment from the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association are subjects for wiser (or more foolish) heads than mine.

"All the cables, tackle, winches, tugs, salvage vessels and beach gear used in refloating the you-know-what could NOT draw me into this controversy.

"My concern is that these ladies are underprivileged to the extent of one dinner."

Miss May Craig, correspondent for several Maine papers, and Doris Fleeson, columnist, made brief talks praising their host as a "protective male," and saying the ties were presented to show Pentagon officials that Kimball is surrounded by a host of "doting women."

The guest list:

A-Spy Fuchs Gets 14 Years; Gives 'Atoning' Information

in his confession he did not know the Russian agents he contacted. However, it was possible Fuchs could have supplied descriptions and other information.

Sir Hartley described the defendant as a brilliant scientist now "disillusioned and ashamed" because he realized he had served a "false cause" for seven years.

Gives Thanks for Treatment

He calmly stood before the court after the charge had been read. With one hand in a pocket, he spoke the word "guilty" in tones scarcely audible.

Then after sentence had been pronounced, he uttered a brief statement, in soft broken English.

"I have had a fair trial," he said. "I thank you, my Lord. I thank my counsel and the governor and the staff of Brixton Prison for their considerate treatment."

A touch of further mystery was added to the case after Fuchs, showing no emotion at all, nimbly followed officers to the cells below the courtroom.

A woman, about 35, hatless and wearing a green dress, was permitted to enter the cells. An attendant refused to give her name, but said she had seen Fuchs.

The bachelor scientist, who came here as a refugee from the Nazis in 1933, pleaded guilty to four specific charges: imparting atomic information to Russia at Birmingham, England, in 1943; at New York between December 31, 1943, and August 1, 1944; at Boston, Mass., in February, 1945; and in the County of Berkshire, England, in 1947.

At these times he knew the greatest secrets of Los Alamos, N. M., where the first atomic bomb was assembled, and of Harwell, the center of British atomic research where he became chief theoretical physicist.

In his statement, Fuchs said, however, "I have also committed some crimes other than the ones with which I am charged."

Trust Action Begun Against Newspaper

Cleveland, March 1 (AP).—The Lorain Journal refused to print the daily programs of radio station WOL of Elyria, Ohio, even as paid advertising, the station's head testified today.

The Government's first witness, President Roy Ammel of the Elyria-Lorain Broadcasting Co., made this statement as its antitrust suit against the Journal opened.

The Journal, Lorain's only daily newspaper, is charged along with four of its officers with restraining trade by refusing advertising to merchants placing ads with Station WEOL. This is the first case of its kind against a newspaper.

Defense Counsel Parker Fulton opened with a statement that one of the participants named in the Government's suit actually were engaged in interstate commerce.

Publisher Samuel A. Horvitz of the Journal calls the suit a "threat to the rights of every American newspaper and publication in the United States."

Rathborne Says Tom Clark Urged Him to Tell of Bridges

San Francisco, March 1 (AP).—Mervyn Rathborne, star government witness in the perjury trial of Harry Bridges, testified today that former U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark, personally, asked him to be a government witness.

He said the Attorney General told him that "the cold war was on, and in event of a shooting war, the Government was of the opinion that the Communist party would act as a fifth column in this country."

Rathborne, admitted Communist from 1935 through 1947, was for years a close associate of Bridges in Union matters. Bridges is president now of the CIO longshore union. He was indicted for perjury, charged with swearing falsely in his 1945 citizenship hearing that he was not a Communist.

Rathborne said Clark told him that the Department of Justice was engaged in activities to prevent the Communists from being an effective menace to this country.

Defense Attorney Vincent Hallinan asked: "Did you say anything about Mr. Bridges?"

"Mr. Clark did," Rathborne replied. "He said they were making an investigation and it was their opinion, as far as the investigation had proceeded, that Mr. Bridges was a Communist and something should be done to remove his influence."

Then the witness added: "He figured Bridges was a danger to the country."

House Group Urges Review of Strategy man Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) announced.

The committee criticized the existing Joint Chiefs setup as not always insuring "adequate consideration for the views of all services." Legislation will be pushed this year, it was said, to make the Commandant of the Marine Corps a member of the group and requires rotation of its chairman every two years among the services.

Discussing Navy charges that the Air Force has neglected tactical aviation, the committee called upon the Pentagon to establish a joint training center in this field. The Air Force, Army and Marines should take part, it was said.

Joint maneuvers also were urged to determine the relative worth of Air Force and Navy fighters and tactical bombers and such other problems as the comparative merits of the Navy's Banshee and the B-36.

The group recommended that the House Appropriations Committee make a thorough review on whether current aircraft procurement funds will give the Nation the air power it needs. They also proposed legislation requiring the Secretary of Defense to consult with the Congressional appropriations committees before impounding any appropriated funds.

Defending the admirals for presenting their "frank views" during last fall's hearings, the committee declared they would have been wrong not to have spoken their minds when called.

The group also expressed "strong doubts" whether the Joint Chiefs should pass on weapons one service wants to develop to carry out its assigned missions. At the present "formative period of unification," it said, heads of one service know too little about problems of the others.

As to interservice bickering, the committee concluded that there are "no unification Puritans in the Pentagon." The report put it this way:

"There has been a Navy reluctance in the interservice marriage, an over-ardent Army, a somewhat exuberant Air Force—all services, in the view of the committee, at fault here and there."

McMahon Proposes U. N. Hold Atom Peace Parley in Moscow

and "establish joint means of executing that strategy," he said.

With a solid-front approach, McMahon continued, the new proposals should be taken openly to the Kremlin.

McMahon rejected the idea that "private dickerings by a few top-level negotiators" could solve the momentous issue.

"We must open the mind and heart of the free world, and unify its purpose, before we open the door of the conference room," he said.

But with a new and unified approach to Moscow, McMahon insisted, "we will go with strength such as the Kremlin has never before confronted."

McMahon's speech yesterday appeared to be closer to the general policy and philosophy of the State Department than his proposal of a month ago.

At that time he suggested—and he revived the suggestion briefly yesterday—that all nations devote two thirds of their present military budget to worldwide economic rehabilitation, in return for general agreement on disarmament and international atomic control, through inspection.

State Department and White House response to this idea, though not direct, was nevertheless cool. Secretary of State Acheson implicitly discounted it by pointing to the uselessness of paper agreements with Russia.

The only workable accords with that nation, he indicated, are those that Russia is obliged to embrace and live up to because they reflect existing conditions of fact—situations of strength confronting her.

Thus, in proposing yesterday to create one of those situations of strength, by consolidating a common program with our allies, McMahon seemed to be hitting close to Acheson's target.

As an immediate step—and apparently as a preparatory one to a formulation of an atomic peace plan by Atlantic Pact nations—McMahon announced new sessions of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee.

These hearings, closed to the public, will consider whether the present United Nations program for internal atomic control can cope with the new situation of the hydrogen bomb.

McMahon said he believed it did. But, he added, every doubt should be removed. Therefore, the new technical aspects relating to the H-bomb and its manufacture should be scrutinized to see how they fitted into an atomic control plan.

The only effective control, McMahon was sure, followed the lines of the U. N. plan, derived from the Baruch plan and the Acheson-Lilienthal report. It necessitated putting "Russian inspectors in every American atomic plant and American inspectors in every Russian atomic plant."

This would provide "rascal-proof safeguards"; security would not depend on mutual trust, but on automatic and "dramatic warning signals" of violation.

McMahon's speech took added effect from its tight argument and singularly impressive and moving wording.

At the outset—again following the State Department-White House line that there are no easy ways out of the present crisis—McMahon warned that the arms race "mocks our hopes of balancing the national budget."

The necessity of fighting communism "with dollars and goods" as well as defense armaments may mean a 10 or 15-year cost equal to that of the last war itself, he said.

And at the same time, he noted, freedom, as well as mere survival, was at stake.

SEN. BRIEN McMAHON
Wants meeting in Moscow

"A lasting atomic armaments race will corrupt and poison freedom even if we could somehow hope to avoid war," he said.

The "new crisis," he went on, is the prospect of a point in time when "10 hydrogen bombs or 20 or even more will be available and poised on both sides of the Iron Curtain."

Therefore, he said, there is an "imperious timetable" forcing action "before the store of horror weapons reaches critical mass, and chain-reacts into a global tragedy."

U. S. View Not Grasped

One of the reasons to call a meeting of the Atlantic Council, and to broadcast its findings far and wide, is the circumstance that "the people of the free countries abroad do not now appreciate the sincerity and the profundity of our American will to peace," Mr. Mahon stated.

But the Council meeting could help "demolish this wall of misunderstanding."

Further, the conversations "might lead to an understanding that each chief of state would go before his own people and set forth the real nature of the atomic-hydrogen crisis—and the fresh solution that all the free nations had prepared in concert and pledged themselves to support."

Just because Russia and the United States are the only nations with atomic bombs does not mean that they alone should discuss a solution, McMahon argued.

"There is a wider fellowship here," he said, "the fellowship of the potentially doomed; and it embraced all mankind."

Therefore, he said, the proper forum for ultimate discussion, after the Western Nations had agreed on a plan, was the General Assembly. Russia is the only one of the four great powers that has not been the host to a General Assembly meeting, McMahon pointed out.

help as a means of wringing political concessions from him.

He also showed his political independence of the West last week by recognizing the Communist-supported Ho Chi-minh as the rightful leader of most of Indo-China—a move which the French Foreign Office promptly branded as a "hostile act."

Some of Goods Ready

The loan yesterday was evidence that American policy toward Tito had not been changed by his recognition of Ho or by other signs that he was going his own way in foreign policy.

Tito will not have to wait long to get the benefits of the new loan. Some of the goods involved are already at American ports awaiting shipment; Tito ordered them before he had any money with which to pay for them.

Like all Export-Import Bank loans, this one will bear interest at 3½ percent, but Tito will not have to start repaying it, in 14 semi-annual installments, until January 1, 1954. The bank provided this long period of grace so that Yugoslavia could meet heavy dollar payments coming due in the meantime, including a repayment of 6 million to the International Monetary Fund.

Exports to U. S. Jump

Yugoslav exports to the United States earned only 5 million dollars in 1948, but jumped to 16 million last year and are expected to soar to between 30 and 35 million this year, mainly in zinc, lead, copper, timber, cement and paprika.

"Gaston, the Bank chairman, said the figure of 20 million was a "mutual estimate" by the Yugoslav and American governments of Yugoslavia's minimum needs at this time.

which pledges the signers to seek closer political and economic cooperation. The Secretary said the State Department was studying this and other possible methods of strengthening the treaty machinery.

On another subject, Acheson said the State Department was in complete and thorough accord with High Commissioner John J. McCloy, who on Tuesday had emphasized the need of free elections in all of Germany.

Absolutely free elections in Germany had long been one of the requirements of American policy, the Secretary said, but it has been impossible to get an agreement on such elections from Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky of the Soviet Union.

McCloy will arrive here Friday, officials announced, to testify before the House Appropriations Committee on funds for the High Commission in Germany.

Acheson also commented briefly on the revaluation of the Soviet ruble. He said his department was trying to analyze the Soviet decision, but such analysis might be difficult.

The ruble is not circulated outside the Soviet Union, he said.

Lehman Sees No Threat in DP Program

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) denied yesterday that the displaced persons program is a threat to national security.

Lehman

The charge has been made by persons opposing President Truman's request for a new DP law minus what he called the discriminatory features of the present program. The Senate is debating the measure.

Lehman said in a Senate speech that all refugees are "screened and rescreened"and put through "much more stringent" tests than normal immigrants.

"Let us not be misled by those who would reject the whole because of a few exceptions to the rule," he pleaded. "The overwhelming majority of displaced persons who have come to America have adjusted and are adjusting successfully.

"This is an incontrovertible fact and cannot be denied. Never before has the immigrant been as carefully screened or as effectively helped in adjusting himself to his new homeland."

Lehman, the opening speaker on the Senate's second day of debate on DP legislation, said the decision will have world-wide repercussions.

"The eyes of the world are looking today to the United States for moral, political and spiritual leadership," he said. "Our decision will either buoy the spirits of the democratic peoples of the world or it will stifle America's strong and vibrant voice as the leader of freedom-loving peoples everywhere."

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), said the United States has a responsibility of caring for displaced persons who were injured by the last war. But, he said, it is not required to provide a haven for every European who decides "to take off for America because of political changes in their home lands."

'Talkie-Talk' Teaching of French Hit

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The State Department is following an "orchid-lined lane to language achievement."

A teacher of French said so yesterday and warned that while it may be all right for State Department employes, it's no way for college students to learn a foreign language.

She said "a more prosaic journey over the long winding roads of hard work and sheer determination will alone bring the neophyte to his linguistic mecca."

The French teacher, Dr. Melva Lind of Mount Holyoke College, criticized the streamlined method used by the State Department's foreign language institute.

It's a "talkie-talk" method, she said.

The State Department's fast language method, similar to that used by the Army during the war, places emphasis on hearing and speaking the language.

When the Army ran the program it had its students under strict military control, Dr. Lind said. The State Department, too, can govern its students.

But the college teacher, Dr. Lind remarked, is up against "free personalities flowering in a free environment." And this includes:

"The omnipresent Goliath of football weekends, jaunts to the nearby metropolis, extensive beauty preparations for an impending prom, an accumulation of examinations and long papers in three or four other subjects."

London (Thursday) March 2 (U.P.). The Soviet Union has charged Finland with violating her treaties of peace and friendship by "evading in essence" a Soviet demand for the return of 300 alleged war criminals, Moscow Radio said today.

Russia first accused Finland of harboring war criminals in a formal note delivered on New Year's Eve.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko handed Finnish Minister Karl Sundstroem a new note in Moscow Tuesday night. It rejected Finland's January 21 reply to Moscow's original note as "not satisfactory."

It asserted the "Finnish government" is . . . "evading the fulfillment of obligations and violating the peace treaty and the treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance.

"The Soviet government declares on account of this the reply of the Finnish government is not satisfactory."

It said the Allied Control Commission had asked for the extradition of more than 300 Russian war criminals, but, since September 15, 1947, Finland had surrendered only 24.

"All the persons accused by the Soviet government are known to the Finnish government and are being protected by the Finnish authorities from being handed over to the Soviet Unjon," it said.

The note also repeated earlier charges that Finland had provided false names and papers for many of those wanted by the Kremlin.

Chiang Plans Dictatorship, Li Charges

New York, March 1 (U.P.).—Li Tsung-jen said tonight that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was trying to set up a dictatorship and warned that the people and the armies would not support Chiang if Formosa is attacked by the Communists.

Li, acting president of Nationalist China until he was ousted today by Chiang, called the act the "most unconstitutional in the history of democracy" and said he would fight Chiang's resumption of the Presidency with every means at his disposal.

He hinted at a revolt against Chiang by democratic and liberal people of Formosa and progressive elements in the army and indicated he might call on the United States Government to refuse to recognize the Chiang government.

One of Li's aides said he would go to Washington—possibly Thursday—to confer with President Truman and that he would also talk with Gen. George C. Marshall, long a proponent of a liberal government in China. He conferred late today with Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to Washington.

Li has been convalescing here from a stomach operation performed a month ago.

Theft Suspect Dies After Chase Shooting

A 39-year-old burglary suspect, wounded early yesterday by police in a wild chase through Northwest streets, died in Garfield Hospital at 6:30 p. m. last night.

He was Juan Fino of 6200 Landover st., Landover, Md. Police said he was shot in the back of the head.

Surprised by Police Pvts. James S. McWhirt and Patrick W. Hanft in the Eastern Star Restaurant, 4840 Georgia ave. nw., Fino escaped from the policemen and fled from the neighborhood in a car.

The resulting chase drew more than 20 police cars—one of them carrying Hyman I. Fischbach, counsel for the House Crime Subcommittee, and his assistant, John Woog.

Alson in the chase was a former Army top sergeant who heard police broadcasts about the arrest and told a passing scout car the direction their quarry was headed, and a police radio broadcaster who "masterminded" the pursuit.

The two policemen came on Fino while he was "raiding" the restaurant icebox, police said. He had already filled a basket with canned food and meats.

When Fino "twisted" away from them, they fired several shots after him, but he didn't stop.

The former top sergeant, Bowen E. McDonald, 30, of 919 Farragut st. nw., hearing sirens, tuned to the police radio, then investigated.

Seeing Fino running out of an alley and drive away, McDonald stopped a passing scout car containing Pvts. Webster D. Dawson and Edward J. White and told them where the car was headed.

The chase ended at Kansas ave. and Nicholson st., where the car crashed into a street barricade.

Fino ran into Fort Slocum Park. Private White fired a total of six shots, Dawson five.

One of them felled Fino. He was taken to Garfield Hospital with the bullet wound in the back of the head.

In Montgomery

Law Argued On Election Procedure

The first broadside was fired yesterday in the battle between forces favoring nonpartisan council elections in Montgomery County and defenders of the two-party system by opposing batteries of attorneys in the County Circuit Court.

The issue is whether the State Lindsay law, requiring partisan council elections, or the act of the County Council providing for elections without party designation, shall control balloting procedure in council elections.

After two hours of argument, Judges Charles W. Woodward and Patrick Schauffer promised an early ruling to permit its filing with the State Court of Appeals for a final decision before this year's elections.

The opening skirmish leading to yesterday's major engagement was the filing of an injunction suit by Col. Norman B. Ames, charter committee president last month, to bar the supervisors of elections from holding a party primary. The suit, filed a day after Gerald D. Morgan, Bethesda attorney, submitted his candidacy for a council seat on the Democratic ticket, contended the Lindsay law is invalid.

The County Council subsequently threw its reserves into the struggle through a petition of intervention on behalf of Colonel Ames' suit, and the Democratic State Central Committee made a late sortie last Monday with an intervening petition to join forces with the supervisors.

Carey Quinn, attorney for the supervisors, fired the opening shot in court with a flat contention that the council's election law is invalid, as the council did not possess the power to pass it.

He contended the Lindsay law is general in nature, and "does not apply to Montgomery County alone, but to all counties which may adopt a charter in the future."

Paul F. Due, Baltimore lawyer retained by the State Central Committee, maintained that acts of any charter government must be subject to the general laws of the State.

Section 3, Article 11A of the State Constitution holds, he said, that the public general law controls in cases of conflict with public local law.

He described the Lindsay law as an amendment to the Express Powers Act which "merely points out the established requirements for party elections."

James J. Hayden, Colonel Ames' attorney, counterattacked with his contention that the county elections act is valid. Also using Section 3, Article 11A as ammunition, he said it provides that the charter must provide for an elected legislative body, and places no restrictions on the manner of conducting the election.

"When you think of the basic idea of the charter, which is to provide home rule," he said, "it is difficult to reconcile the thought that the legislature can amend or repeal provisions determined by the voters."

Moving in to support the validity of the county law, David Macdonald, county attorney, quoted Section 13, Article 1 of the Maryland Code as providing: "where the public general law and the public local law of any county, city, town or district are in conflict, the public local law shall prevail."

The Lindsay law is unconstitutional, he maintained, because the General Assembly does not possess the power to legislate on this subject. This power, he declared, has been granted to the people of Montgomery County.

Resignation Is Backed by Woodlawn

Members of the Woodlawn Citizens Association last night voted unanimous support for the public interest committeein its demand for the resignation of a Prince Georges County commissioner and allotted $50 to aid it financially.

The 38 members, meeting at the Landover Hills Public School, passed a unanimous vote of confidence in its president, John Marburger, for helping organize the public interest committee.

The committee last week called for the resignation of Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh, sr., as a result of his vote in favor of rezoning of the 22-acre Keller tract adjacent to Woodlawn to permit erection of semidetached homes.

On Tuesday, a petition signed by 33 residents of Woodlawn was delivered to the county commissioners, deploring the attack on Commissioner Welsh by the public interest committee.

Hollywood Talks Of Recession as 2 Studios Lay Off

Hollywood, March 1 (AP).—The film industry nervously talked of a recession today as at least two studios were reported cutting their staffs.

Daily Variety said Warner Bros. was laying off 50 percent of its studio personnel. The studio refused comment.

Paramount was also reported plannig severe cutbacks in its studio staff as five pictures were postponed. The studio has a large backlog of unreleased films.

Some layoffs have been made in production crews at 20th Century-Fox, which also is in a good backlog position. Top executives of RKO are here now to plot the future of the studio, which is trying to line up additional financing.

Of the five big studios, only MGM appears to be in full production. The studio announces it will adhere to a schedule of 40 films in 1950.

Technicolor-Movie Contracts Thrown Out

Los Angeles, Feb. 29 (AP).—A consent judgment in the antitrust suit against Technicolor, Inc., was signed today by Federal Judge William C. Mathes.

The judgment terminates contracts between Technicolor and film producers, who allegedly had been forced to use only Technicolor cameras and services in making color movies. It also requires Technicolor to grant licenses on 92 patents on a royalty-free basis and to make others available at reasonable charge.

Sothoron Home Rule Bill Passed, Sent to Gov. Lane

Annapolis, March 1.—The Prince Georges County reorganization bill cleared the General Assembly today and went up for the signature of Governor W. Preston Lane, jr.

Among the provisions of the bill are that it gives the county commissioners added legislative power in local matters; sets up a fulltime chairman of the commissioners at $7500 a year; eliminates the county merit system; establishes tighter fiscal control, with an annual budget audit, and calls for two commissioners' meetings a week, instead of one.

In the wake of last night's House consideration of the measure, Prince Georges delegation Chairman Perry O. Wilkinson today clarified a statement he made to Montgomery County Delegate R. Duncan Clark.

Clark had asked Wilkinson whether the bill "preserves the one-party system in Prince Georges County." Wilkinson, speaker protem at the time, answered "yes."

Today he told a reporter for The Washington Post he had not heard Clark's statement. If he had, Wilkinson said, he would have answered:

"It certainly doesn't attempt to destroy the two-party system, as we have seen attempted in some jurisdictions."

During today's session, the House adopted a resolution introduced by the Montgomery County delegation asking the State police superintendent to consider establishing a police substation and barracks in the county.

The resolution pointed out that State police facilities in the county "now are inadequate for the great and growing communities of Montgomery County." Delegate R. Duncan Clark, explaining the purpose of the resolution, said there are only three State policemen assigned to duty in the county now, although its population is about 150,000.

Nearest Maryland police substations are at Frederick and Waterloo.

Guarantees You Better Baking OR YOUR MONEY BACK
MILLED EXCLUSIVELY FOR HOME BAKING

ONE QUICK RECIPE—
MAKES TWO TASTY TREATS!

Kitchen Craft Flour does more than promise . . . it guarantees better baking! Change to this flour milled exclusively for home baking and see what extra-wonderful homemade goodness it gives . . . with this recipe and all your recipes.

Dinner rolls and breakfast coffee cake from this one quick recipe! Combine 1 cup scalded milk, ¼ cup sugar, ¼ cup shortening and 2 tsp. salt. Cool with ½ cup milk. Crumble in 2 (¼ oz. each) cakes compressed yeast; stir until dissolved. Blend in 4 eggs. Gradually stir in 4½ cups sifted Kitchen Craft Flour; mix to a soft dough. Fill 12 well-greased medium sized muffin cups ⅔ full. Add ½ cup seedless raisins to remaining batter and pour into well-greased form pan (7 cup capacity). Let both rise in a warm place (about 85°) until double in bulk (rolls 30 minutes—form cake about 50 minutes). Brush rolls carefully with melted butter or margarine and sprinkle with poppy seeds. Bake in a moderate oven (375° F.). (Rolls 20 minutes—form cake 35 minutes.) Serve rolls hot. Allow form cake to cool. Brush with icing if desired.
ICING: Combine 1 cup confectioners sugar, ¼ tsp. light corn syrup, ¼ tsp. vanilla and enough orange juice to make a soft icing. (Milk or water can be used instead of orange juice.)

U. S. Economy Held First Line of Defense

America's "first and foremost line of defense"—in either a "cold" or a shooting war—remains her economic system, Wesley F. Rennie, executive director of the Committee for Economic Development, declared here yesterday.

Rennie

Rennie spoke to a meeting the Washington chapter of American Trade Association Executives at the Mayflower Hotel.

Also at the luncheon, ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman received an honor medal from Freedoms Foundations, Inc., of Valley Forge, Pa. The group honored Hoffman for a magazine article, entitled "More Machines Mean More Labor," written before he took the ECA post.

Rennie told the group that the "American economic system is the material foundationon which rests our social and cultural structure."

The Nation's economic strength was decisive in winning World War II, he asserted, and now "is the prime mover in peacetime recovery for many countries.

"It is the greatest single bulwark of the new organizational machinery working for peace in and through the United Nations. It is the most hopeful source of technical aid for the under-developed areas comprising two thirds of the world's population."

The fact, Rennie added, that the United States is building the H-bomb merely emphasizes the importance of an adequate and balanced over-all program.

Contraceptive Sale Ban Voted

By a Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 1.—The Maryland Senate tonight passed the bill banning the sale of contraceptives in vending machines and sent it to the House for action.

Before The Senate passed on the bill, it adopted an amendment proposed by the Senate Judicial Proceedings Committee to limit the sale of contraceptives to vending machines to public places that sell liquor.

While this would permit vending sale of contraceptives in taverns and bars, the bill specifically prohibits sale in railroad, bus or airline terminals.

As originally drafted, the bill would have prohibited sale in any public restroom in Maryland. Unless the House goes under a suspension of rules, it cannot consider the measure until Thursday.

Two Fenwick Bills Passed In Virginia

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, March 1.—The Virginia Senate today passed two Fenwick bills as the House of Delegates waded into a lengthy appropriations measure for 1950 and 1952.

Passed by the upper chamber were these measures proposed by Senator Charles Fenwick of Arlington:

1. To bring Arlington Chamber under the law permitting appointment of a board of real estate equalization by the Board of Supervisors in any given year.

2. To alter the law relating to the mentally ill to eliminate among other things use of the words "feebleminded" and "insane," and to substitute therefor "mentally ill" and "mentally deficient."

The House prepared to renew its consideration of the proposed 598 million-dollar budget the first order of business Thursday.

Delegate J. Maynard Magruder of Arlington said he will propose an amendment to one section reappropriating $62,500, unexpended in the 1948-50 budget, of State funds for completing the George Washington Memorial Parkway to the Fairfax County line.

Magruder said he wil recommend that the State's share be increased to $87,500, on advice of Planning Engineer C. L. Kinnier, who said the original figure was based on 1947 land costs.

The Federal Government pays half of the cost and the State matches the county's appropriation of one-fourth the total. The 1950-52 outlay would help pay for Units 3 and 4, extending from Spouts Run to the Fairfax County line.

Welfare Gets $1000 Boost In Fairfax

Fairfax County's welfare department got a $1000 boost yesterday from the County Board of Supervisors to keep alive its program of aid to dependent children.

The supervisors made the money available after Miss T. Mary Beacham, welfare superintendent, said the department was nearly out of funds to help dependent children, to offer convalescent care, and pay for hospital expenses for indigents.

The $1000 is to last until June 30, end of the fiscal year.

The supervisors also asked the state of Virginia to buy the Alexandria Water Company's 114-acre Lake Barcroft, and the 566 wooded acres around it, for use as a state park. The area is up for sale.

In another act, the county zoning ordinance was amended to prohibit further application for rezoning within six months after an application has been denied.

Magic Shows Were Orgies, Girls Charge

Los Angeles, March 1 (U.P.).—Two high school girls accused a professional magician today of exercising Svengali-like powers to induce them into sexual relations with at least 17 youths.

The magician, William J. Van Berkel, 63, was booked on morals charges.

District Attorney William E. Simpson said Van Berkel, confronted with the full account told by the two 14-year-old girls, confessed he had instructed them in the art of "love relationship."

Simpson said the magician told him "something came over me last October and I just couldn't resist instructing the girls about sex."

The girls said they were employed as assistants in the magic act which Van Berkel performed at school assemblies.

His method of operation, they said, was for them to lure students backstage in school auditoriums on the pretext of assisting with props in the magic act.

They said Van Berkel then would have them indulge in sexual acts while he kept others from going backstage on the pretext his magic performance was secret.

He also would invite boys for rides in his automobile and in secluded areas would induce the youngsters to have sexual relations while he looked on, they related.

Bonus Passed By Md. Senate

bill. The Senate bill called for an $89,998,800 fund but was later amended and raised to 125 million dollars.

Both bills have since been amended to apply also to veterans of World War I. The House bill has been further amended to call for an increase of 1 percent per $1 in the State sales tax and to specify that the financing provisions for the bonus shall be made a part of the referendum question.

Four Bills Cleared

Meanwhile, The legislature drove the last pegs of Governor Lane's construction program into place tonight—and cut the tax that will pay for State Capital improvements.

After suspending rules the House and Senate cleared away a stockpile of bills to:

1. Authorize $3,872,000 worth of new construction at State institutions.

2. Use savings in accounts previously set aside for mental hospitals to finance improvements costing $2,800,000 at Spring Grove State hospital and Rosewood training school.

3. Reduce the real estate tax by more than 100 percent — to six cents on the $100.

4. Write into all State loans acts a provision to hold future property rates to the minimum necessary to service outstanding bonds.

Silver Spring Board Protests Sales Tax Rise

Annapolis, March 1.—Opposition to the proposed increase in the sales tax came yesterday from the Silver Spring Board of Trade in a telegram to the Montgomery County delegation.

Einar Christensen, president of the board, wired, "Our businessmen . . . would be seriously adversely affected by an increase in the sales tax as Washington has a two percent tax and our merchants are now fighting for their very existence against terrific competition and price reduction from Washington merchants. We urge you to oppose actively and vigorously any legislation increasing the sales tax."

Lustron Plant Closing Brings 'Hill' Protests

The RFC's foreclosure action against Lustron Corp. stirred new protests on Capitol Hill yesterday with a CIO official charging that the Government agency is "out to kill" the prefabricating housing industry.

This charge was made by Leo Goodman, director of the CIO's national housing committee, w[ho] appeared along with a group of Lustron dealers before a Senate Banking subcommittee.

Goodman said the Lustron case should be taken out of the hands of the Reconstructic Finance Corp. and turned over to the Housing and Home Finance agency for settlement.

He also suggested setting up an advisory board representing the armed services, the National Security Resources Board and the Federal Housing Administration to help work out a solution.

The RFC filed the foreclosure suit after rejecting the company's proposals for refinancing its loans totaling $37,500,000.

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.), acting chairman of the banking subcommittee, told reporters he thinks the RFC "botched" handling of the case, but said it probably is too late to do anything to avert complete shutdowns of the Columbus, Ohio, factory.

On that point RFC Chairman Harley Hise said his agency will not consider withdrawing its request that the plant be closed immediately. But he told a reporter, "we still have a good chance to work out something that will give Lustron better management and bring sufficient private capital into its operations to make it a growing concern."

W. W. Lobdell, of Rockford, Ill., the leader of the Lustron dealer group, urged the lawmakers not to "let anybody pull the rug out from under us at a time like this." He said the dealers stand to lose about 10 million dollars in investments if the plant closes down.

Montgomery Nursery Schools to Confer

Twenty-five of Montgomery County's nursery schools—public and private—will cooperate in a conference Saturday on "foibles and problems" of young children.

The conference will be held at the Green Acres School, 1275 Rockville Pike. Fifty teachers will participate.

Arlington Panel To eDbate Hatch Act

"Should the Stennis Amendment to the Hatch Act Be Enacted?" will be the topic of a panel discussion at 8:15 p. m. today by the Arlington Democratic Club. The group will meet at the Lyons Park Community House, Pershing dr. and North Fillmore st., Arlington.

Speaking for the affirmative will be John W. Jackson and Conrad H. Reid. Debaters on the negative side will be Daniel A. Dugan and Bertram Gross.

Illinois Union Orders 10,000 Into Mines

The only bright spot in the coal crisis was in the Midwest, where the Progressive Mine Workers union ordered its 10,000 miners back to work after signing a month's truce with Illinois mine owners.

Gas and electric cutbacks hit hard in Ohio and Pennsylvania, the East Ohio Gas Co. cut off deliveries to 700 plants in 12 northeastern Ohio counties. An estimated 40,000 workers may be furloughed.

Duquesne Light Co. in Pittsburgh cut its power by 50 percent to all consumers—industrial, commercial and domestic. Trolley service was cut 10 percent.

In Illinois, Governor Stevenson created a State emergenry coal committee to aid hospitals, public services and high priority users to obtain coal.

The Nation's railroad had furloughed more than 60,000 crewmen and shopworkers and will make more layoffs under a new ICC order expected shortly. Reading Railroad announced that it was closing its locomotive and car shops at Reading and St. Clair, Pa.

Henry Ford 2d, president of the Ford Motor Co., said yesterday in Detroit "This country will be shut down in two weeks" if the coal strike continues.

The statement indicated that Ford expected his automobile company would be forced to halt production after that time. Such a move would idle 110,000 production workers.

Asked in an interview if there was any way the auto industry could overcome the national coal emergency, Ford said:

"If John L. Lewis wants to put his own prestige above the welfare of the country, we're licked. You can't make a man work if he doesn't want to."

Packard Motor Car Co. has announced its auto production will stop March 6.

At Steubenville, Ohio, a tipple and loading office were demolished by dynamite. At Empire, Ala., $185,000 worth of mining equipment was blasted. At Keyser, W. Va., a truck driver told police pickets shot off his rear tires.

Coal Dealers' Bins Exhausted

schools have about a month's supply, officials reported.

Arlington County's two principal coal yards said they had no supplies left. One dealer said he expected a few carloads of pea coal later this week.

In Prince Georges County, a Seat Pleasant dealer received some Virginia coal and doled it out in half-tons. Several other dealers, declaring they will be without coal by Friday, referred many customers to the Seat Pleasant yard.

Late yesterday Defense Secretary Louis Johnson announced military coal would be made available to relieve critical civilian shortages. Applications from cities in this area were to be directed to Fort George C. Meade, Md.

Washington does not plan to apply for such supplies as yet, J. Thomas Kennedy, chairman of the District Fuel Coordinating Committee, said.

Yesterday local dealers received one 50-ton railroad car of coal from Virginia mines and had promises of another 3350 tons. This was obtained by the dealers contacting mines on a list prepared by the Virginia Emergency Fuel Commission, Kennedy explained.

The load was described as containing low-grade coal in large lumps. The dealer was seeking a crusher last night.

The city still has the 5000-ton soft-coal "cushion" borrowed from the Potomac Electric Power Co. Kennedy said this may be dipped into late today or Friday if serious shortages develop.

The procedure for obtaining coal from this stockpile is for the consumer to fill out a certificate at the dealer's office. This is sent to Kennedy's committee for investigation and if approved the certificate is completed, giving the dealer authority to draw from the Pepco yards, Kennedy explained.

The outlook for churches receiving supplies was dim, Kennedy said, after an inquiry by Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), chairman of the House District Committee. At present none of the Pepco pile will be distributed to churches, he said.

The executive branch of the Federal Government reduced heat to 68 degrees yesterday. On Capitol Hill, the House and Senate Office Buildings and the Capitol stayed on a 72-degree level. David A. Lynn, architect of the Capitol, said a 10-day stockpile is on hand and further supplies have been assured by the general service administration.

The headquarters of the United Mine Workers at 15th and I sts. nw., is still warm with temperatures ranging from 68 to 70 degrees. The building has a week's supply of anthracite coal on hand and its superintendent, W. J. Thomas anticipates no better treatment than other consumers in obtaining further tonnage.

Cumberland Transit Pact Averts Strike

Cumberland, Md., March 1. (AP)—The Cumberland Transit Co. came to terms with its AFL union employes today on a new contract and a bus strike was averted.

UMW Trial Closes; Judge Keech Ponders Contempt Case

with the strike ban, were resumed yesterday after a one-day rest, but a two-and-a-half-hour session "accomplished nothing at all."

The union's chief negotiators, John L. Lewis and John Owens, were both absent. Lewis was returning here from Springfield, Ill., where he had been attending the funeral of a brother; Owens was in District Court as a witness in the contempt trial. The peace talks will be resumed at 2:30 p. m. today at the Statler Hotel.

After two dull days of the contempt trial, the third day's session produced a little excitement in the clashing of the opposing counsel and the crisp, but always good-humored intervening remarks of the jurist.

Jenner Says Hoosiers Discuss Impeachment

By The Associated Press

Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) said yesterday Indiana Republicans in Congress have discussed whether impeachment proceedings ought to be started against President Truman for his handling of the coal dispute.

The union insists it has in good faith sought to carry out the injunction and get the men back to work. John Owens, secretary-treasurer of the union—a man of robust physique and slow speech—testified yesterday that the UMW officers had done "more" to carry out the terms of the injunction than the union ever had done in past injunctions.

Also in his closing arguments, Welly K. Hopkins, chief UMW counsel, hammered away at the point that the union had taken all reasonable, customary steps to call off an unauthorized strike, but that the miners themselves decided to defy both the injunction and the union because of "accumulated" grievances against the coal mine operators.

Judge Keech, however, wanted to know what "sanctions" the UMW had taken to enforce compliance of its instructions to the miners.

"There is no power of coercion and punishment in the United Mine Workers," responded UMW Counsel Hopkins. "Would you want the UMW to revoke all the charters . . .? When then would coal be dug?"

"It is common knowledge that unions take steps to obtain compliance in other things . . ." commented Judge Keech.

The jurist also asked the defense to explain what John L. Lewis, president of the UMW, meant when he, in ordering the miners on February 11 to comply with the antistrike injunction, he said that he had "no alternative" but to take the action.

The Government's principal counsel, Assistant Attorney General A. Graham Morison, contended that the back-to-work orders of Lewis were weakly worded instructions lacking force and vigor, and actually part of a "scheme" to show compliance without breaking up the strike. The "no alternative" phrase had been emphasized in this respect.

Hopkins, in replying to the judge, said that "no alternative" was to be interpreted this way: that no matter how distasteful the injunction was to the union, the UMW meant to carry it out. Hopkins denied, again and again, that the UMW had any intent whatsoever—"by wink, nod, or code, or scheme"—to undermine the anti-strike injunction.

Judge Keech kept the testimony and debate to the "narrow issue" of whether or not the union is guilty of criminal and civil contempt in failing to end the strike of the soft coal miners.

Use Anti-Trust Act on Labor, NAM Advises

The National Association of Manufacturers declared yesterday that anti-trust laws for labor unions would help prevent "crisis strikes," such as the current coal dispute.

Raymond S. Smethurst, former general counsel for the NAM, urged Congress to continue its study of a bill by Senator Robertson (D., Va.). It would subject unions to the anti-trust laws in cases where they were deemed to be restraining trade unreasonably in essential industries.

In a statement prepared for a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, Smethurst said it would be unfortunate if that group were persuaded to abandon consideration of the bill because of any pressure to push through Congress stop-gap legislation to deal with the coal situation.

The coal strike, Smethurst noted, is in the hands of a Federal court, and he added:

"The issue now is whether the law of the land and the orders of that court are going to be obeyed. If law enforcement and orderly judicial processes are to break down, then Congress is faced with rebellion—not a labor problem."

Smethurst indorsed the principle of the Robertson bill but suggested a number of changes. They included broadening its provisions to apply not only to essential industries but to substantial restraint of trade in any commodity.

Sit-in Strike Wins Backing Of Teamsters

New York, March 1 (AP).—A greeting card company, beset by 14 sit-in employes during their fifth foodless day, failed today in an effort to move its quarters to Catskill, N. Y.

Union van drivers—members of the AFL International Brotherhood of Teamsters—refused to cross picket lines and pick up furniture in the offices of the firm, Fuld & Co.

As the trucks rolled away after the drivers refused to cross a picket line of about 100, the sit-in employes leaned from windows and waved.

The sit-down strike was being waged by 10 women and 7 men, who are among 24 employes discharged because the company wants to move operations from New York City to Catskill, N. Y., and they didn't want to move with it.

The strikers want severance pay. The company has started court action, seeking an order to evict them.

Conferees Reach Agreement on Basing-Point Bill

Senate and House conferees reached agreement yesterday on a "basing point" bill.

Generally speaking, it would allow a manufacturer to sell his products at uniform delivered prices (including freight) to buyers at varying distances from the shipping point.

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.), who announced the agreement said the measure would not be called up for a final vote in either Senate or House before March 13.

Coming Sunday in Parade:
WANT TO BE A MILLIONAIRE?
It can still be done, but some of the old rules have changed. Parade interviews six leading businessmen to find the key to their success and shows that some of the old proverbs need modernizing. 1950 is not the year to be operating on the theory that "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush,' says Howard Johnson, for example. Byrd Offers Salary To Help Cut U.S. Debt

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), offered yesterday to dig into his own jeans to help President Truman reduce the national debt.

In a caustic "road-to-socialism" speech to the National Small Business Men's Association at the Statler, the Administration adversary said:

"I would gladly return my pay check" to the Federal Government if it "guaranteed the money will be turned to reducing the public debt."

The national debt stands about 265 billions. A United States Senator's salary is $12,500.

Senator Byrd indicated he felt safe in making the offer because he was certain the Treasury wouldn't give him such a guarantee.

No Subsidies for Him

President Truman's sharpest critic on spending policies declared he was an "apple grower who doesn't accept a single penny in Federal subsidies."

The Virginia legislator pulled out all the stops in his appeal for less big Government and a balanced budget which "may never come until we go over the precipice of financial disaster."

Some statesmen, he said, have called the present trend toward socialism "Statism," "Welfare State" and "Collectivism." "I have a new word for it, I say it's 'Ruinism.'"

Unless the complete Truman program is halted the Federal budget may reach one trillion dollars 40 years from now, he said.

Approves of Hydrogen Bomb

"And that number of one dollar bills piled together, would reach the moon seven times without any left over to pay our debt. I don't mean that as a joke, either," he added, explaining a statistician had figured it out for him.

Byrd attacked the Federal School Lunch program, saying lunches for children were something "the parents should pay for. It would only cost them 20 to 25 cents a day," he declared.

Byrd strongly indorsed Truman's go-ahead signal on development of the hydrogen bomb.

"I believe we should have all the bombs, atomic or hydrogen, of the best quality possible, and have all of them right here in America."

It is not "realistic," he said, to think we can arm 16 nations abroad sufficiently to withstand Soviet aggression.

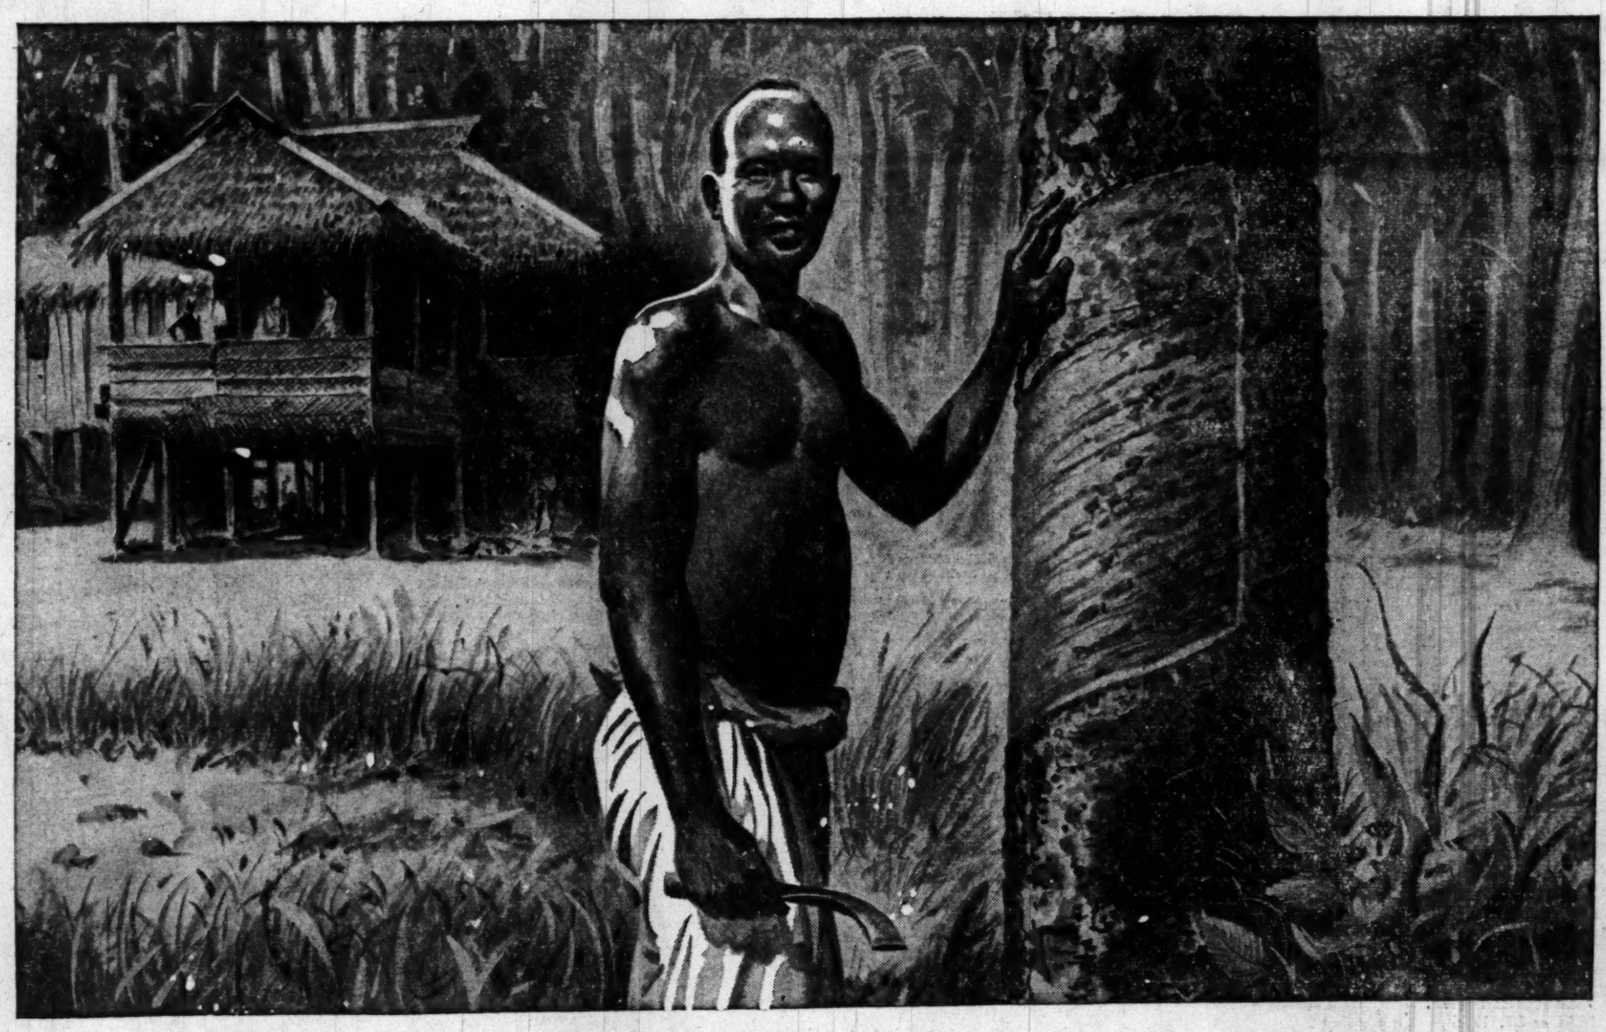
A TREE GROWS IN MALAYA



It is a rubber tree.

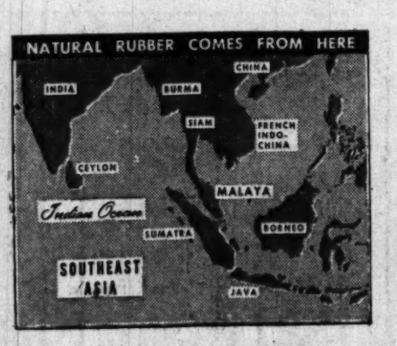
There was not a single one in Malaya 70 years ago.

Today there are billions of them.

They grow on over 400,000 independent one-family farms of a few acres.

Altogether, these small farms produce nearly half of all the rubber grown in Malaya. The other half comes from larger plantings, called "estates".

This rubber is sold on a free market — unsubsidized, uncontrolled and unrestricted.



It is selling today at pre-war price levels, one of the few agricultural products that has not doubled or tripled in price since 1940.

Rubber is the key to the prosperity and economic stability of Southeast Asia — a stronghold of Democracy in the Far East.

And from the milk of these rubber trees flows a way of life for the whole world — for without rubber our modern civilization could not exist — our automobiles and trucks and planes could not move.

More natural rubber means better living for all — the grower and the user — today and in years to come.

Educational Unit Would Deny Public Funds to Church Schools

Atlantic City, N. J., March 1 (AP).—The American Association of School Administrators approved today a resolution calling for denial of public funds to parochial schools.

Only a handful of "nays" were heard as delegates to the association's convention voted for the resolution. More than 7000 delegates crowded into the convention hall's ballroom for the session on resolutions.

James L. Hanley, superintendent of schools at Providence, R. I., was the lone objector of the association's 27-man resolutions committee, which submitted the resolution to the convention.

He said in a minority report the resolution "is unnecessary and harmful to the cause of public education."

John L. Bracken of Clayton, Mo., president of the association, said later that Americans "consider their school teachers to be mass baby-sitters." He charged that as a result of such an attitude, "Education has been only a minor arm of the Army, Navy and State Department" in the effort to bring democracy to Germany.

"Educators have not had their full says," he said at an interview.

Bracken acted as chairman of a panel of leading educators attending the convention.

Of education in Japan, Willard Givens, executive secretary of the National Education Association, said:

"Tremendous progress has been made in the democratizing of Japan through education—through the use of their schools and colleges—their total education program."

Theater Town

Washington is beginning to take on the attributes of a metropolis. It has been for some years a political center, an educational center, a mecca for tourists—as well as the home town of a goodly number of intelligent, loyal and patriotic subcitizens of the United States. Now it is going to be a theater town as well—perhaps, in time, a theatrical center. It used to be one of the best theater towns in the country. And there is nothing fantastic in the thought that it may before very long have four or five legitimate theaters operating in sprightly competition.

The news that the American National Theater and Academy will lease the Strand, once known as the Academy of Music but of late years relegated to the presentation of minor movies, is the most heartening development in the long struggle to bring dramatic entertainment back to the National Capital. It means first-rate and first-run productions for Washington. ANTA is a professional organization, chartered by Congress and directed by a number of the most successful of New York's commercial producers. It has the funds, the experience, the know-how and the access to the best in theater material necessary to give Washingtonians the kind of theatrical fare for which they have too long gone hungry.

We wish the Strand all good fortune. We wish the Gayety good fortune, too, in its revival of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and in such subsequent productions as it may present. We wish the Belasco well, in case ANTA, as has been reported, decides to go ahead with the leasing and remodeling of it as a second string to its Washington bow. We even wish good luck to the National, if its lessee should find himself able to overcome his prejudices against operating a theater on the American plan. Perhaps Washington can look forward to a brilliant 1950 theatrical season.

Equal Education

The Federal Government, through Solicitor General Perlman, has again asked the Supreme Court to strike down the legal fiction that segregated facilities for Negroes can be considered equal facilities. Recently the Solicitor General filed a brief as a "friend of the court," supporting the suit brought by Heman Marion Sweatt, who was excluded because of his color from the all-white Texas University Law School, and the suit of G. W. McLaurin, admitted to the graduate school of the University of Oklahoma but required to sit at a special desk set aside for him in the doorway. Earlier the Solicitor General filed a brief in support of Elmer Henderson, who had been denied service on account of his race in a Southern Railway dining car.

In the Henderson case, segregation was imposed on the basis of a regulation by the railroad approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Thus the United States was a party-defendant in the Henderson suit, and the Department of Justice elected to assail the official governmental position which it would normally have the responsibility of defending. Despite the thin and silly charge brought against the Solicitor General by two members of the American Bar Association, we think it altogether creditable that the Government's weight should be thrown into the scales in the interest of justice rather than in the interest of a mistaken governmental position. In the Sweatt and McLaurin cases, segregation was imposed by the universities on the basis of State laws. Thus, in these cases, the Department of Justice is acting to defend individuals who have been denied the equal protection of the laws of Texas and Oklahoma in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Sweatt and McLaurin cases illustrate the essential absurdity of the "separate but equal" doctrine. The State of Texas has offered Mr. Sweatt a new law school set up especially for him and the few other Negroes in the State qualified to enter it. But it is, of course, a law school in name only, no matter what its physical facilities. It cannot give Mr. Sweatt the contact with fellow students and the collision of ideas which are essential parts of a legal education. Mr. McLaurin has actually the same physical facilities as his white fellow-students but is denied membership in their community in a manner patently intended to humiliate him. To pretend that this is equality of educational opportunity is to ignore the very purpose for which the segregation is imposed.

The "separate but equal" fallacy was enunciated in Plessy v. Ferguson in 1896. Mr. Justice Brown declared that "the object of the (Fourteenth) Amendment was undoubtedly to enforce the absolute equality of the two races before the law" and then went on to say that if "the enforced separation of the two races stamps the colored race with a badge of inferiority . . . it is not by reason of anything found in the act, but solely because the colored race chooses to put that construction upon it." This must take place as the most monumental piece of hypocrisy ever uttered from the bench. It is high time for the Supreme Court to overrule it.

Guilt By Reiteration

Senator McCarthy's charges about Communists in the State Department have been so vague, so numerous and so conflicting that the Foreign Relations Subcommittee assigned to investigate them was understandably perplexed as to the scope of its responsibilities. Originally, Mr. McCarthy spoke, in the present tense, of 205 persons now working in the State Department who were known by the Secretary of State to be members of the Communist Party. Then Mr. McCarthy sent a telegram to the President asserting that "we have been able to compile a list of 57 Communists in the State Department." The list has now mysteriously expanded to 81—but with this significant distinction, that an unspecified portion of the 81 are not now members of the State Department at all, although according to the latest bulletin from Mr. McCarthy they were once employed there.

Four persons presumably included in the Senator's list have been named by him. They were named, however, in a public speech where he lacked the protection of congressional immunity, and, slander being actionable, he took the precaution to say to a reporter, "You will notice I didn't call them Communists." Everybody noticed. Of the four named by the Senator, one has never been a State Department employe, two others have not been in the department since 1946 and the fourth has been cleared by a grand jury that investigated charges brought against him. A fifth individual, identified as on the McCarthy list, was given an unqualified clearance when he worked for the department in 1947 and has been investigated by the FBI and cleared again for his present job on the White House staff.

No one doubts that the State Department at one time employed persons who were security risks. But it purged these persons long ago. If Senator McCarthy's charges are intended to prove only what the department has long since admitted and corrected, they will be even more pointless than they now appear. There seems to be no alternative, however, to a patient, thorough examination of them along the lines promised by Senator Tydings' subcommittee. But certainly this examination should not expose to further calumny persons whose loyalty has already been incontrovertibly established. The subcommittee should be able to expose Senator McCarthy without exposing innocent persons whom he has tried to victimize. He seems to take the view that if aspersions are repeated often enough they will take on the color of credibility even when they deserve no credence.

Secretary Acheson's commendable statement that he would welcome an investigation of his department's personnel should not be taken to mean that he—or the President—will surrender to the subcommittee the FBI's confidential reports on his employes. These cannot be given to any congressional body without doing wanton injury at once to the FBI, to the individuals who were the subjects of its investigations and to vital national interests. Senator Ferguson seems bent upon precipitating a senseless conflict between the executive and legislative branches of the Government through an attempt to secure these confidential reports by subpena. We hope that the Senate will be wiser than to press so destructive a demand.

Rent Control

We welcome the opportunity to reply to the "Irate Subscriber" who accuses us of inconsistency because, he asserts, we approved the action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in refusing to vote operating funds for the housing expediter. It is true that The Washington Post has taken a strong stand against attempts to "legislate by appropriation." We shall continue to oppose this noxious practice. And there was no intention of implying approval of the committee's irregular procedure in our support of the substance of the procedure. We agree with our correspondent that the Appropriations Committee should have voted the funds required to enforce the law effectively, leaving the way open for the introduction of rent control legislation by the appropriate committee.

However, the committee's action cannot be regarded as a deliberate attempt to thwart the will of Congress, as was the case when the House Appropriations Committee, then under the chairmanship of Representative Taber, refused to vote funds to give effect to legislative mandates. Federal rent control expires at the end of the fiscal year, and there is strong sentiment against its extension. Consequently, it is quite likely that the Appropriations Committee was reflecting the will of the Senate when it recommended that the deficiency appropriation be limited to the amount required to pay terminal leaves to employes of the rent control agency. If Federal rent control is to be abandoned at the end of the fiscal year, there are strong arguments in favor of tapering off control activities instead of voting additional funds to keep the rent control agency operating at full speed for a few more months. By cutting down expenditures the agency can, it is believed, keep going on its present funds until June 30. Consequently, the proposed cut in deficiency appropriations would not entail abrupt termination of its activities.

Furthermore, in this particular case the Senate will soon have an opportunity to express its views on the subject of rent control, if it should vote to restore the funds requested for operating purposes for the remainder of the fiscal year. If it upholds the committee action, on the other hand, it would be futile to press for action on a bill to extend control, and time-wasting debates on this controversial issue could thus be avoided.

Stikker's Visit

The Foreign Minister of the Netherlands, Dr. Dirk U. Stikker, is seeking acquaintance in Washington in his new role as political coordinator for the Organization of European Economic Cooperation, the opposite number in Europe of ECA. This is a new post. It was set up when Paul Hoffman was last in Paris trying to abolish the compartmentalization of Europe and get action on economic integration of the Marshall Plan countries. Dr. Stikker is a sort of generalissimo of integration, a peacetime Eisenhower, let us hope, who will lead the way out of the present jungle of separatist economies.

Secretary Acheson insists that "while there is growing popular debate in Europe on the problem of federation, neither the people, nor their governments, appear ready for this step." We have had many inquiries as to Mr. Acheson's source for this. The statement hardly squares with all we have heard about the attitude of Europeans, but Mr. Stikker should know, and the opportunity is given today to the members of the National Press Club, which he will address, to ask him.

The newspapermen will find a man who believes in a dynamic togetherness for Europe. In Dutch, we understand, his name means joiner, so that all he has to do is apply his own name to his great and constructive task. He has been joining people since liberation. Employers and workers have a new relation since Stikker, one of Holland's foremost employers, went on a crusade against industrial strife. He had a meteoric rise in politics with a middle-of-the-road party he himself founded. Now he seeks to join countries, and he may rest assured that no work could possibly give more satisfaction to those Americans concerned to see a start made on the foundations of peace and the answer to the German problem.

End Of The Leopard

Let us be grateful to the Oklahoma leopard who at the cost of his life provided us with a pleasant diversion from the gloomier affairs of state. Here in Washington the excitement was the more pleasant because quite vicarious, since there was little possibility of his turning up hereabouts. But, of course, the people in the neighborhood of Oklahoma City, those at any rate who had small children, had some reason for anxiety. Statistically perhaps, it cannot be shown that a leopard on the loose is any more dangerous than a careless automobile driver, but in these matters peace of mind seems to depend upon what one is accustomed to.

Those who know about leopards describe them as "ferocious, bloodthirsty and cunning," and the Oklahoma leopard, which was not born in captivity, but taken wild from his native jungle, was supposed to have all those characteristics. When he escaped, the zoo authorities saw fit to issue public warnings that he was a bad customer indeed. Whereas, it was said, lions, tigers and wild animals generally kill only for food, a leopard kills for the fun of it.

Since the leopard was obviously very hungry, and owed his capture and destruction to that fact, this distinction now seems rather academic. Evidently he found nothing either to kill or to eat in the 16-mile range over which his tracks were discovered. At one point, however, he may have made the attempt. A rancher reported that his cattle had stampeded without reason, but evidently none was missing. This may indicate that the leopard lost his nerve. Anyway, he returned to the zoo, ate the doped food that was set out for him and died 15 hours later.

Another theory is that he got lonesome for the mate he had left behind him. And this brings up an interesting speculation about what the consequences might have been if both animals had managed to escape. There is, as you know, considerable difference between the Oklahoma countryside and the Indian jungle to which they were accustomed, and they would have needed a good deal of the old pioneer spirit to make the adjustment and to raise a family and to contribute another species to the fauna of the Southwest.

NEIGHBORS

The birds come down in winter from the wood
For seed and suet to the window-box:
The wild and songless; the loud bluejay's brood;
Snowbird and chickadee and larks in flocks.

The deer sometimes come stepping through the snow,
Wary and watchful, feeding in our meadow:
The proud high-antlered stag, the gentle doe,
Mottled with sun, moon-dappled in grey shadow.

Winter makes friends when hunger tempers fear!
Blest be the winter, blest be the chill night,
Since in their need, the forest folk draw near.
The world is one, when all the world is white!

"End Of Rent Control"

When John Taber's Appropriations Committee refused to allocate the funds to put into effect legislation already approved by Congress, The Washington Post editorial page thundered in righteous indignation.

The issue had been debated in both Houses, you pointed out. The bill had been enacted, yet here was Mr. Taber "thwarting the will of Congress" by trying to usurp functions which did not belong to him. A shameful practice, indeed. Other attempts to "legislate by appropriation" drew similar fire from your editorialists.

But what has happened to your high principles now that you favor an end to Federal rent controls? Your editorial of February 27 puts a stamp of approval on the action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in refusing funds for the Housing Expediter thereby in effect nullifying the expressed will of Congress.

If Federal rent controls have indeed outlived their usefulness, this decision should be taken openly, after full and formal debate on the central issue.

Whatever the result, the Nation would be bound to accept it. If Federal rent controls were ended, State Legislatures would have formal notice of an orderly change in national policy, and would have an opportunity to fill the gap if they chose.

But what kind of local controls will be enacted if rent controls are terminated by the slow strangulation of a sneak attack?

Will such a policy really be in the national interest, or will it serve merely to bring on a period of confusion and hardship for low and middle-income families?

I am not arguing the merits of rent control with you. You have your opinion; I have mine. But I am talking about the proper method for determining national policy. And I think you owe your readers an explanation of why legislation by appropriation is right in one instance and wrong in another.

"Guests of the Senate"

I read your editorial of February 22 referring to the legislators from Japan, and their reception several weeks ago at the hands of the Boston City Council.

Your editorial seems to be speaking for the American people, when you say, "They must now know that the attitude they encountered in Boston is not the attitude of the American people." I heartily disagree, as no doubt will many others whose wounded hearts are not yet healed and in many cases never will be because of the inhuman treatment received from the Japanese. I am not trying to defend the action of the Boston council, but the council is surely composed of men of integrity and of good standing in their community and if they saw fit to keep them out of their private meeting, that is their business. The Japanese visitors had no business there anyway unless invited.

Who are these Japanese legislators, what is their background, what if any, was their share in Japan's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, what if any, was their share in Japan's inhuman war on the American people? Many Americans are no doubt asking the same questions. Why was it necessary to send this delegation to the United States; is it to show them democracy at work? If this is the reason, then they need not come here for they are receiving a lesson in democracy right at home, from that great leader, Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Budget Accounts

Some of the city's mercantile institutions are guilty of sharp practices in the misleading "budget account."

Under this plan, at the time of a purchase a carrying charge of 6 percent is added to the bill; however, the customer is informed that if he pays in full within 90 days, he does not have to pay the carrying charge. To throw the customer off guard, a "carrying charge credit," equal to less than half the actual charge added, is issued but not deducted.

Then starts the dirty work. The customer is billed in monthly payments for the total purchase price plus the full carrying charge. If he pays his bills when received he pays the full carrying charge, regardless of whether the purchase price is paid within 90 days or not.

Thus, if a "budget account" customer is not alert to protect this form of billing (and most) persons pay bills as received, depending on the reputation of the company for their accuracy), he is being overcharged. Even if he does insist on getting his "service charge credit," he still pays a charge of about 4 percent.

Policy Toward Asia

In his Washington's Birthday address Mr. Truman speaks of the millions of people in the islands and the continent of Asia who have "never known real freedom or democratic government." Of these he says, "In their present condition, the immediate benefit of steel plowshares, or smallpox vaccinations, has more appeal than abstract ideas of democracy."

Applying to this thought the well proven military hypothesis of "the first with the most," we may be well on our way toward the loss of that entire theater in the global cold war. Our knowledge of the enemy gives us little hope for a second campaign of the cold war variety. Thus as we drift closer toward conditions of hot war our position becomes deplorably less favorable.

It is time for the State Department to cease its demonstration of unimplemented policy, (which must surely bring comfort to the enemy), and resort to dynamic tactics.

Cardozo Transfer

It is my sincere hope that the members of the Board of Education, when they finally consider the transfer of Cardozo to Central, will try to keep in mind that schooling of children of junior and senior high school age is the important thing. Adult education and recreational programs, important as they are, should be secondary to the day-by-day instruction and participation of these children.

Federal Funds And Private Schools

On January 13, The Washington Post published a letter by 21 prominent clergymen, educators and other citizens interested in civic affairs, setting forth five basic principles of a bill for Federal aid to education which would be acceptable to forward-looking forces in America. Briefly, these principles are: Equalization of educational opportunities among the States in accordance with need; safeguards against discriminatory treatment of Negro and other minority groups; provision of educational assistance exclusively for educational services; limitation of benefits to tax-supported and publicly controlled educational institutions, and safeguards by judicial review to prevent violation of these principles. Since the publication of that letter, most of its signers have formed the nucleus of the Committee on Federal Aid to Public Education.

The committee has carefully studied the Thomas bill (S246) and has unanimously concluded that the Thomas bill is inconsistent with the principle limiting benefits to tax-supported and publicly controlled institutions.

The Thomas bill would permit the States to use the funds allocated by the Federal Government to supply transportation or secular textbooks to denominational schools in the 20 States which permit one or the other type of "indirect" assistance to sectarian education.

It also omits any provision for judicial review, and thus makes it possible for a direct grant of Federal funds to a sectarian school if the State law itself provides no remedy to prevent such misappropriation of public funds.

The amount of Federal funds which may be available for sectarian purposes under the Thomas bill would undoubtedly be small. The principle, however, is basic. Any measure which opens the door, even slightly, to the use of Federal funds for the support of parochial schools presents a far more serious threat to the future of the American nonsectarian public school system than is compensated for by the funds provided for in the Thomas or any other pending Federal bill for aid to education.

Accordingly, we believe that enactment of the Thomas bill might be the first step toward the complete disintegration of the American nonsectarian public school system, one of the greatest contributions made by America to Western civilization.

Our committee has also considered the new Barden bill (H. R. 7160), also now before the House Education and Labor Committee. Of all the bills being considered by the House committee, it corresponds most closely to the principles set forth in our letter of January 13.

The Barden bill allocates the Federal funds among the States on the basis of need. Wealthier States may receive a nominal allocation which cannot exceed $5 a year for each child of school age; but the bulk of the funds are to be distributed among the economically handicapped States for the purpose of equalizing educational opportunity. The bill seeks to equalize educational expenditures for every public school child in each State without regard to color. It excludes noneducational services such as health and medical benefits, it limits expenditures to tax-supported and publicly controlled institutions; and it provides for judicial review to prevent violation of these principles.

The Barden bill can, in good conscience, be supported by forward-looking forces concerned with the preservation of the American public school. We urge its favorable report by the House Committee on Education and Labor.

Salvaging 'Best Brains'

By Malvina Lindsay

Dispute Over Method

BETWEEN THE lines in the biography of many a member of Congress is the story of a youth who worked his way through college. He may have taught country school "on and off," worked in the wheat fields, waited tables and fired furnaces at college boarding houses.

Whatever he did he has a memory of struggle. Hence when the proposed bill to give Federal scholarships to needy, promising high school graduates comes before him he may say, "Look at me! I got an education on my own."

Other rugged individualists are likely to chime in with, "If any kid wants to go to college bad enough he'll find a way." More specific are those who insist that work opportunities, scholarships and private loan funds enable any needy and ambitious boy or girl to go to college.

Still another private enterprise approach to the Nation's urgent need to salvage the brain power of its youth is that of having industry establish a large national scholarship loan fund. This was recently proposed by Murray Shields, vice president of the Bank of Manhattan Co.

However proponents of the Federal scholarship plan see it as the only way of doing something quickly, effectively and on a wide scale to stop present waste of the country's most strategic resource, the talents of promising youth. For now less than half the students in the top fourth of high school graduating classes go to college. Higher education has been priced out of the market except for the well-to-do.

BUT WHY CAN'T all these poorer boys and girls handle their own educations as did many of our legislators and business leaders? A great number of young people do educate themselves. But today, nearly everybody wants to go to college. A recent study showed that 84 percent of parents wanted their sons to go to college, that 69 percent were similarly ambitious for their daughters.

Hence the competition for campus jobs is much higher than formerly. And college tuition, textbooks, laboratory fees, other costs have soared. So have living expenses and living standards.

Yet what about college and other private loan funds? Some educators say these are not being taken up. That is partly because many students hesitate at the beginning of a long college career that includes technical or professional training to take on such long-term obligations. Also high interest rates deter in some cases.

Hence many educators believe that the Federal scholarship program should include outright grants to freshmen, that advanced students should help pay their way, and that only graduate students in professional schools who will soon be earning should receive loans.

One objection of rugged individualists to the Federal scholarship program is that under it taxpayers would have still another group on their backs. Yet recently Dr. James R. Killian, jr. president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, warned that taxpayers were supporting a flow of mediocrities from the colleges and thereby not getting their money's worth.

THIS WILL continue so long as finances rather than brain capacity are made the passport to higher education. Then should college opportunities be based on intellect alone? Should rigid scholarship tests weed out mediocre students who often are sent to college for prestige or social contacts?

Would that be a democratic procedure? And hasn't the college some function besides developing brains? Does it not keep masses of untrained adolescents off the labor market and give them discipline, ideas, experiences that will make for better citizenship even though the intricacies of nuclear physics roll off their backs?

If colleges can't be restricted to a caste of brains, however, neither should they be to a caste of money. This country's hope of maintaining its technical supremacy, of meeting its economic and social dilemmas, even of forging ahead in what seems the inevitable armament race, lies in developing brain power to explore new frontiers.

President Truman in his budget message proposed expending one million dollars in the 1951 fiscal year for a scholarship program. Whatever proposal for this is finally worked out in a bill—and whatever bill may get through Congress—it is not likely that any subsidized army of bright boys and girls will descend on colleges in the immediate future.

The program would start in a small way reaching only a few hundred thousands of the two to three million college age persons regarded as college material. And plans still envision many of these student beneficiaries supplementing their income by the traditional road to fame—doing jobs around the campus.

Sex Crime Cure

Again we are being treated to what seems to me a lot of nonsense concerning sex crimes against young children.

It is a dementia which, among the young, may be curable and some cases may be worth the effort. But, usually it becomes a deliberately cultivated crime, and at the second offense castration should be inevitable.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Report On Germany

WRITING recently from Berlin, Mr. Demaree Bess of the Saturday Evening Post reported on "a growing impression that Moscow was sidetracking its plan for a German communistic dictatorship, and is now chiefly interested in an old-fashioned nationalist alliance—that the same Soviet leaders who have made two previously mutually profitable deals with Germany are laying the groundwork for a third deal." Mr. Bess is an experienced and objective observer. What he has reported has been foreseen as most probable for some time past and it is supported by much independent evidence.

Lippmann

Yet his estimate has never been taken seriously enough by the British and American architects of the existing German policy. They have had the will to believe that a western Germany could and would become a dependable and contented member of the Western alliance, and they have tended to treat all the evidence to the contrary as a kind of hangover of Nazism and nationalism. Their theory has been that because the election showed that only about 20 percent of the voters were openly Communist or nationalist, there was a solid democratic majority of 80 percent behind their hopes for a west German state. This was the basis of Mr. McCloy's speeches in the United States and at Stuttgart after he returned to Germany: that there was only a minority which need cause concern; that by dealing sympathetically with the great pro-Western majority and firmly with the unreconstructed minority, our policy could be made to work.

BUT THIS theory that the majority of Germans feel and think and will act as our policy requires is itself based on a remarkable collection of theories, —namely that the west German state, cut off from eastern Germany and eastern Europe and beyond, can prosper; that it can absorb 10 million expellees and refugees; that the west Germans are sufficiently non-nationalist to accept the partition of Germany, the indefinite military occupation of Germany, the disarmament of Germany, and the subordination of Germany as a second class member of the Atlantic community.

But even if these far-fetched theories were true, the whole conception would still rest on a most remarkably improbable assumption. It is that Stalin will not play the aces which he holds in his hand.

MR. BESS has found, however, that Stalin is playing his aces. He can offer the Germans the end of the partition and a reunited Germany with its capital in Berlin. He can put an end to military occupation. He can offer the German expellees and refugees the hope of a return to their homes in the annexed territories, and the additional hope that even if these territories are not wholly or partially recovered by Germany, they might be given a certain autonomy, or in some degree neutralized or jointly administered by Germany and Poland. I have reason to know from my own inquiries in Bonn last October that some arrangement of this sort has already been explored.

Stalin can also, as Mr. Bess brings out, offer German industry tempting opportunities all the way from Poland to China—not merely opportunities but well-nigh exclusive and protected privileges to play a leading part in the industrialization of this immense but economically backward area.

Stalin can offer the Germans the reminder that "Germany and Russia are natural allies, and the most astute German statesmen since Bismarck have recognized the fact." Mr. Bess shows that Stalin has already done just that, saying in his message to the east German republic that "the German and Soviet peoples . . . have the largest potentialities in Europe to complete great actions of world significance."

ANYONE who shrugs off the power of these appeals to German pride, patriotism, tradition, and immediate interest—saying complacently that the Germans hate the Russians and bolshevism—does not know German history, does not know Germany today, does not know human nature. In my view he lacks common sense and is whistling in the dark.

MR. BESS has drawn no conclusions as to what we ought to do about it all. I wish he would make the attempt. In any event his report is a warning which Mr. Acheson ought not to disregard that—though there is still some time left, there is not endless time— to recognize the real forces in Germany, and to work with them and through them, not as at present against them, not pretending that they do not exist or are not very strong.

Electoral Reform

By Marquis Childs

Lodge-Gossett Pros And Cons

THE constitutional amendment to reform the Nation's antiquated electoral system has produced some of the strangest alliances in recent political history. The lion and the lamb lying down together have nothing on the strange companions who are teamed up on one side or the other of the issue.

Childs

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts is chief advocate of the amendment that would divide the electoral vote of each State in proportion to the number of votes cast for the two major parties.

Under the present system all the electoral votes of a State go to the candidate who gets a majority of the popular vote even though that majority may be a mere dozen votes out of several million cast.

On the surface, at least, this looks like an equitable and desirable reform. The sponsorship of Lodge would weigh heavily in its favor, since the Senator from Massachusetts has proved his courage in standing up against timid and reactionary leaders in his party. When the amendment was before the Senate, 19 Republicans voted for the amendment, the total vote being 64 to 27. Twenty-four Republicans voted against it.

In the House the sponsor of the amendment is Representative Ed Gossett of Texas, who has always taken a narrowly reactionary view, particularly on any issue involving race or color. In urging all Southerners to crusade for the amendment, Gossett is quite frank in stating that the goal is to end "irresponsible control and domination by small organized minority groups within the large pivotal States." He names these groups as Negroes, "the radical wing of organized labor" and "with all due deference to our many fine Jewish citizens, they constitute a third group."

SHARPLY opposed to the amendment is Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. He has sent a letter to each member of the House urging its defeat. Lodge has written to all House members appealing for favorable action.

Taft is convinced, as he said in his letter, that in a national election that was at all close a Republican would not have a chance. This is because of the one-party system that exists in the South where, because of that system, Southern electoral votes have a far greater weight proportionately than Northern electoral votes. Taft led the opposition in the Senate.

Ranged alongside Taft in opposition is former Representative Charles M. LaFollette of Indiana, who is now national director of Americans for Democratic Action. ADA is, of course, loathed by conservative Republicans who appear to have started an organized campaign to discredit it.

Citing recent election results, LaFollette contends that on the basis of present voting strength in the country, "12 or 13 Southern States would produce five or six times greater proportionate margins of victory for the Democratic Party than all the rest of the States together." This, as the ADA director sees it, would tend to give the power within the party to the Southern delegations, thereby freezing reaction in control.

IN THE 1948 election LaFollette points out, Truman won 100 out of his total margin of 114 electoral votes in five Northern and Western States, California, Illinois, Iowa, Ohio and Wisconsin. Under the proposed amendment these States, where the popular vote was close, would have given him a margin of only 1.1 electoral votes. But in Georgia with its 12 electoral votes, Truman would have received a margin of 5.1 votes.

Lodge replies that the Lodge-Gossett amendment would spur the development of a second and opposition party in the South. In the long pull this might be true and certainly the only healthy political system is a two-party system.

But, as Taft points out, it would be a lengthy process if it occurred at all in view of the concentration of power that would accrue to a Southern oligarchy. And Taft is not thinking of elections 25 years from now. Understandably, he has his eye on 1952. A few more defeats for the Republicans and the party may pass out altogether.

Among the 67 who voted for the amendment in the Senate were most of those who consider themselves progressive and liberal, including Senator Hubert Humphrey, national chairman of ADA. The chances seem to be slightly against its adoption in the House.

Undoubtedly something should be done about the outmoded electoral college, but maybe this particular remedy is not the right one. Senator Homer Ferguson has an amendment which abolishes the electoral college, retains the present unit-rule system and, as an added safeguard, provides for a combined House-Senate vote for President in case no candidate gets a majority. That may be a less risky means of wiping out that quaint and rickety antique, the electoral college.

Political Economy

America Ages

AS census takers begin their rounds this April 1, their painstaking notes will answer many questions about Americans besides the simple "how many?"

They will tell us not only what kind of a nation we are, but what kind of a nation we may become in the next half-century. For the American people are growing older, living longer, and—despite the present baby boom—having fewer children than they once did. These facts will affect our economy—our whole structure of business and government.

In 1820, 60 percent of our people were under 20 years of age. Today the figure is in the neighborhood of 35 percent. Two things have happened to us in the intervening years; not only has our birth rate declined in every decade but two, but the steady progress of medicine has added years to our lives.

While oldsters numbered only 2 percent of our population in 1820, and 4 percent in 1900, the proportion is today nearly 8 percent. By 1975, if mortality continues low and birth rates high, some 20 million persons, more than 11 percent of our population, will be over 65.

More important than this, we are not only an aging nation, we are one whose growth is slowing down. Population experts believe that sometime after the year 2000 it may level off and then begin a slow decline.

DURING the last century our population was doubling in each generation. This created an enormous demand for capital to house our expanding families, to build highways and railroads across the continent, and to build a national network of power lines and communications.

The American people grew used to saving for these ends. Unconsciously we cut our living standards to provide investment funds.

Slowly over the years our situation has changed. Where once the problem was to save enough for all our investment needs, now it is one of finding enough investments for the saving we do.

During the depression many economists concluded we were a stagnant economy, saving too much, investing too little to provide jobs for all our people.

This view, we realize now, was too gloomy; but the problem is nevertheless a serious one. It can be solved if we consume more, and raise our living standards, or if we can find new industrial fields for investment.

This isn't impossible. The relative supply of capital and labor is changing: now we have an increasing proportion of capital, and a declining proportion of workers. Wages—the price of labor—will tend to rise, if our reasoning is correct, and interest—the price of capital—to fall. In point of fact, this has already happened.

But it need do us no harm. On the contrary, it will put a premium on labor-saving investments, and could provide a major outlet for our savings. If we can only adapt our spending and saving habits to changing needs, America may yet be a more abundant land than it has ever been.

WHAT will it mean to have twenty million old people in 1975?

If all of them are on Social Security rolls (as it seems likely they will be), and if retirement benefits should rise to $100 a month, the annual bill to the taxpayers would reach 24 billion dollars a year.

The prospect has alarmed a lot of people. Yet if our national income is 300 billion dollars a year or higher, the burden will not be excessive. One fact which is usually overlooked is that the growing of old people is cancelled out by the declining burden of young people.

A census study has estimated that 25 years from now the proportion of Americans in the productive age brackets (20-64) will be just as high as it is today. Lesser dependency among children will compensate for greater dependency among the old.

But this tells only part of the story, and not the most important part. There will be fewer young people coming into the labor market—more middle-aged in all kinds of jobs. Will this mean that the old, the cautious, the unimaginative will dig in at the top, blocking the advance of the young and daring?

Our task is to find productive and useful work for our senior citizens without getting that hardening of the industrial arteries we have seen in France and England.

Already our Congress and our courts, once the province of young men, are increasingly dominated by the old. What is happening to America is what happens to armies. In an army which is growing fast and has a high death rate, lieutenants may quickly rise to colonels. But when an army neither grows nor suffers casualties, its generals tend to be old men, and lieutenants remain lieutenants until middle age.

This is the challenge of our aging population. Oscar Wilde once said that America's youth is her oldest and most hallowed tradition. And, he might have added, it has been her most valuable.

CED Asks 2½ Billion Tax Cut

By Samuel W. Bell
NYHT News Service

A tax reduction of $2,500,000,000, rather than the one-billion-dollar increase asked by President Truman, was advocated yesterday before the House Ways and Means Committee by the Committee for Economic Development.

J. Cameron Thomson, president of the Northwest Bancorporation of Minneapolis, as chairman of CED's fiscal and monetary policy committee, said the CED "agrees at some points with the President's recommendations, notably in closing tax loopholes," but opposes his recommendation for an increase from 38 to 42 percent in the corporation tax.

The most important move, Thomson said, would be to reduce double taxation on dividends. He listed these five recommendations for tax law changes:

Extend the loss carry-forward period to 5 years and shorten the carry-back to one year—also recommended by Truman.

Eliminate the present 53 percent "notch rate" on corporate income between $25,000 and $50,000 The 53 percent rate on such income was imposed in wartime to provide the transition from the retained low rates on small corporations to the generally applicable higher rates.

Make interest on future issues of State and local bonds subject to Federal income tax.

Revise Section 102 of the Internal Revenue Code, which applies a penalty to corporations that accummulate profits to avoid payments of individual income taxes by stockholders.

Repeal wartime excise taxes or cut them to one billion dollars.

Samuel J. Foosaner, Newark, N. J., chairman of the Federal Tax Lawyers Committee, opposed increasing estate and gift taxes by 400 million dollars. He said many taxpayers are "afraid to die" because of estate and inheritance levies.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder told this committee," Foosaner said, "that increases in estate and gift taxes have not kept pace with income taxes. Was he, in effect, saying that we are not throttling the American taxpayer enough during his lifetime, and that if we don't get him while he lives, we will finish him off after he dies?"

W. Truslow Hyde, jr., a New York City tax analyst, urged that dividend payments be permitted as deductions from taxable income.

Brannan Plan 'Trial Run' on Spuds Studied

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Brannan Plan would have saved millions of dollars in potato price supports this year, its author, Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan, told the House Banking Committee yesterday.

It also would have lowered the retail price of squds, and would have increased consumption, he declared.

Brannan's testimony came during a hearing on a request of the Commodity Credit Corp. for an additional two billion dollars for price supports. CCC is in danger of using up its present 4750 million dollars during the next crop year, Brannan said.

Revelations by Post On Payments Cited

The Washington Post was quoted by Agriculture Secretary Brannan yesterday on high payments to individual farmers under the price support law.

When asked by Representative Brook Hays (D., Ark.) of the House Banking Committee if it was true that individual potato farmers in Maine drew as much as $500,000 in one year, Brannan replied:

"John Ball of The Washington Post disclosed that fact a few months ago."

He added that one cotton raiser in California got from $350,000 to $500,000 last year.

Brannan must have had reference to Russell Giffen, planter in the San Joaquin Valley. The Washington Post revealed that known payments to Giffen last year totaled nearly four million dollars. The figures, the largest The Post knows about, included: cotton, $2,700,000; barley, $175,000; wheat, $550,000 and flaxseed, $375,000.

Other Disclosures

The hearing disclosed:

1. That some members of Congress are considering giving the Brannan Plan a "trial run" on certain commodities, probably potatoes.

2. That some members are critical of the high payments given to individual farmers under the present law. It was brought out that some farmers draw as much as half a million dollars a year in Government subsidies.

3. That the Agriculture Department opposed the Anderson cotton and peanut acreage law passed last year. Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) former Secretary of Agriculture, recently denied in a letter to The Washington Post that the department had opposed that measure.

Yesterday's hearing also brought out that hundreds of cotton farmers protested against the Anderson law. Representative Paul Brown (D., Ga.) declared that in his district some old-time cotton growers were cut up to 75 percent.

Backed 'Historical' Theory

Brannan said the department opposed the "crop land" theory in the Anderson law. It advocated instead, the "historical" theory, formerly used.

Brannan pointed out that amendments to the Anderson law, passed recently by both houses, would materially increase price supports this year by increasing acreages. He added that an amendment by Senator George D. Aiken requiring marketing agreements in potatoes this year made no "material difference" in present operations.

It also was disclosed that Brannan and CCC President Ralph S. Trigg are going to Canada this week to a meeting of the International Wheat Council. Brannan plans to talk with Canadian officials about cutting down Canadian imports of potatoes.

Answering a query from Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.), Brannan said the costs of supporting potato prices would have been far less if the Brannan plan had been enacted. Losses were more than 220 million dollars in 1948 and will be 80 million this year, he said, and would have been only about 25 million under the Brannan plan.

Engages In Argument

Brannan engaged in a sharp argument with Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney (D., Okla.) over his proposed "production payments." Monroney asked why potatoes had not been subject to marketing quotas this year. He seemed surprised when Brannan told him the law didn't permit such controls on spuds. He also expressed surprise when told that the Anderson farm law, passed last October, made price supports mandatory on potatoes. He said he thought Brannan had the right to support them at any place from "zero to 90 percent of parity."

Further questioning brought out that under the proposed Brannan Plan a limit would be put upon individual payments to any one farmer at about $25,000. Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) suggested, "Why not write in a limitation of that sort here?"

Brannan urged against such action "I hope you don't hang anything else on this bill," he said, "that might hold it up."

Nats Fire Their Opening Gun—and It's a Dud

The Washington Post Sports
Thursday, March 2, 1950 15

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 1.—A couple hours after Catcher Mickey Grasso checked in at the Nats' camp, he was hit by a fair tip. "See here, Mickey, in this league the club doesn't pay the players' fines," said Bucky Harris. "Just thought I'd tip you off."

It was a thoughtful gesture on the part of Harris, it seems. The fiery Grasso drew $1100 in fines from President Pants Rowland of the Pacific Coast League last season after being thumbed out of 23 games for arguments with the umpires, a league record.

POVICH

Grasso was nothing out of pocket, because the Seattle club picked up the tabs for him, a procedure verboten in the majors where the league president demands cash from the fined player. A specific rule forbids a club to remunerate a player for any fines levied, and President Will Harridge gets mad at any under-the-table remuneration by the club.

"I'm not worried so much about the pitching in the American League as I am about the umpiring," said Grasso. "Out in the Coast League they all had chips on their shoulders."

IT WAS Grasso's continual aggressiveness that fascinated Harris, among the catcher's other talents. Harris personally recommended his purchase in the draft, calls him "one of the best catchers in either the minors or majors," and says somewhat beamingly, "he'll give our umpires fits, too."

That latter possibility does not appear to bother Harris, who would like to inject some vinegar into what has been a dead-fish Washington team. "If Grasso doesn't go too far, maybe his spirit will rub off on some of our guys and we'll have a tougher ball club."

Grasso's peak performance among his 23 thumb-outs occurred one day in Seattle when he flung his mask at Umpire Ira Gordon after a dispute on a called ball. He made certain not to hit Hizzoner with the mask, but when Gordon yelled, "out of the game." Grasso unhitched his shinguards and flung them both high into the air.

"I was just hoping one of those shinguards might come down on Gordon's head," said Grasso. "One did, and they slapped me with a $200 fine."

THE TROUBLE with most of the umpires in the Coast League, Grasso was saying, was that they are thick-headed, but thin-skinned. "After somebody fouled a pitch off one day, the umpire handed me a new ball and told me to throw it to the pitcher. I told him 'throw it out there yourself like the umps are supposed to do. He said 'out of the game for you'."

Harris envisions Grasso as the Nats' No. 2 catcher at the outset, and gives him a chance to take over the regular job. Mickey has a mere .250 batting average for Seattle, but considerable long hits were mixed up in that figure, and Harris says "nobody is going to steal bases on him in any league."

It is not curious that Harris was smitten with Grasso in the Coast League last season. The first day he sent Luke Easter, his giant colored first baseman to bat, Easter singled. Grasso immediately picked him off first on the next pitch. Grasso modestly explains it by saying, "it was a hot afternoon and Easter looked sleepy to me, so I caught him napping."

THE GIANTS gave Grasso a try in 1946 after he got out of war service, and put him in Jersey City in 1947. He was the top catcher on that pennant-winning team, and figured in one of the biggest minor league purchases when Seattle paid the Jersey City club $20,000 for him.

There was a four-year hiatus in Grasso's baseball career, due to the war. As a sergeant with the Thirty-fourth Infantry Division, he was taken prisoner by Gen. Erwin Rommel's army in Tunisia along with 6000 of his buddies. Rommel, being pushed across Africa by General Montgomery in 1943, simply scooped up the 6000 United States troops on his retreat.

After three years in a prison camp, Grasso escaped on Hitler's birthday, in 1945, and made his way to the United States lines. It was then the Nazis substituted old men as guards in the prison camps as the man-power shortage became acute. Grasso simply walked away one night while they were asleep.

At Seattle last season, Grasso boasted the biggest fan club in the Coast League. The Mickey Grasso Fan Club numbers 5000 active members. "I made at least a thousand friends by giving away about 1000 balls that belonged to the club," said Mickey.

New and Old In Nats' Camp

21 Players Quit After Working Out For an Hour

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—If you insist on metaphors, the Nats fired the opening gun of their spring training campaign today. It was a dud.

So windy did the 21 players find the day that Manager Bucky Harris called the whole thing off after little more than an hour.

They were only out for exercise, anyway, but they were there long enough togive Harris a new idea: "This is impossible." So tomorrow they're moving back to Tinker Field despite its treacherous footing after giving it a try on a makeshift field abaft the Tangerine Bowl football stadium.

"At least in Tinker Field there are fences to keep out most of the blow," Harris pointed out. "We might just as well stay in the hotel, if we have to work in the wind."

All hands who were supposed to be here have checked in with the exception of the three-man Cuban contingent—Outfielder Roberto Ortiz and Pitchers Conrado Marrero and Sandalio Consuegra.

One's a Holdout

Harris, who has dealt with the Cuban colony before, and is never surprised at their reluctant tactics, learned from President Clark Griffith that his three Cubans have three different excuses for reporting late.

Ortiz, said Griffith is undergoing an operation that will keep him in Cuba for another week. Marrero, the 25-game winner for the Havana club at whom Harris is eager to take a look, will be three or four more days on the island winding up his affairs. Consuegra wants more money before he reports.

"Joe Cambria wired me from Cuba that Consuegra wants a bonus from us," said Griffith. "We won't give him a red penny. Who does he think he is? He only won six games in a B league, and he already belongs to us. He's no free agent."

The same routine that has marked opening-day of training for the last 80 years was in evidence this morning—small groups of players playing pepper games and taking turns at bunting. Harris didn't ask them even to take a few laps around the park, so fearful was he of injuries from the sandy footing.

Have Height, at Least

What Harris did glimpse to his satisfaction was a tall man's club among his pitching staff, with no fewer than four hurlers 6-feet-2 or more. The giant of the lot was Jim Pearce, the 6-foot-6 righthander who won 10 games at Charlotte. In his rarified-air category are also Sid Hudson, Joe Haynes and Rookie Bill Dozier, the latter from Charlotte.

IN SHORT . . . Mickey Harris, known as the hard-luck pitcher last season when he was beaten in low-scoring games, has raised no objection to Harris' plan to use him as a relief specialist . . . "If it will help the club, I can't squawk," said Mickey . . . With Al Evans and Mickey Grasso certain of the first two catching posts, young Harold Keller and Len Okrie are battling for the third job . . . The three infielders, Eddie Robinson, Sam Dente and Sherry Robertson, were in uniform today despite the fact they are here at their own expense until their March 5 reporting date. . . . Tomorrow, when the squad moves back to Tinker Field, Coach Joe Fitzgerald will wheel out "Iron Mike," the pitching machine, to let the guys get some hitting practice.

From Amherst

Lloyd P. Jordan, 49, New Harvard Coach

Cambridge, Mass., March 1 (AP).—Harvard, its football fortunes at the lowest ebb in its long history, today called upon a 49-year-old grandfather, Lloyd P. Jordan, heretofore considered a permanent athletic fixture at Amherst College, to restore its ancient gridiron glories.

Jordan's appointment, for an unspecified term and salary, was announced by Athletic Director William J. Bingham. That veteran Harvard official has been screening head coach possibilities since young Art Valpey suddenly resigned on February 6 to move on to the University of Connecticut.

It can be taken for granted that Jordan, one of the most respected figures in intercollegiate coaching ranks, has been given a long term contract and at least a $12,500 salary.

His appointment was approved by Harvard Provost Paul H. Back and the committee on the regulation of athletic sports at Harvard.

The choice means that Harvard, after last season's disastrous record, has gone back to the idea of having a veteran coach for its football team. Valpey was an experiment with a young man

The 49-year-old Jordan played under the famed coach Pop Warner at the University of Pittsburgh when he captained the 1922 eleven.

In his 18 seasons at Amherst he used Pop's single-wing attack until last season, when he switched to a T-formation.

In that team, which won 4 and lost 4, Jordan's son, John, was quarterback.

His over-all record with Amherst teams stands at 74 wins, 38 losses and 5 ties.

As Drills Open

Newhouser And Stephens Holding Out

New York, March 1 (AP).—Major league baseball opened its 1950 spring training program today with four of its top stars among the "holdout" ranks.

Those who have failed to come to terms are Pitchers Howie Pollet of the St. Louis Cardinals, Bob Lemon of the Cleveland Indians, Hal Newhouser of the Detroit Tigers and Shortstop Vern Stephens of the Boston Red Sox.

Pollet, classy Card lefthander, is at his Houston, Texas, home as is Manager Eddie Dyer who is bedded with the flu. Pollet is seeking $25,000 straight salary

Lemon has checked in at Cleveland's Tucson, Ariz., camp and reportedly is demanding $35,000.

Newhouser and his fellow hurler, Fred Hutchinson are the only Detroit holdouts. Both are at the Tiger Lakeland camp site but neither participated in the team's opening drills. Newhouser has been asked to take a cut from his $65,000 1949 salary while Hutchinson wants a bigger raise than offered.

Stephens, the Red Sox clean up hitter, is reported asking for $50,000, double his 1949 stipend. The Sox management is believed to be willing to pay Junior $35,000.

Navy's Erdelatz Here to Take Over

Eddie Erdelatz, Navy's new football coach, arrived here from San Francisco yesterday and immediately took off for Annapolis. He was accompanied by Don Clark, Forty-niners' guard, who will be his line coach.

Erdelatz plans to start spring practice later this month. He says he will have to start from scratch. His last trip was a bit too hectic to size up material and prospects. That's when he decided to take the job as successor to George Sauer.

N. C. State Favored in S. C. Tourney

Durham, N. C., March 1 (AP).—North Carolina State's basketball team, sporting a glossy 21-5 record compiled while playing a big league schedule, goes after its fourth straight championship in the Southern Conference Tournament opening here tomorrow.

But the top-seeded Wolfpack, rated eighth in the Nation, is no lead pipe cinch to walk off with the honors Saturday night in the 9000-seat Duke Indoor Stadium.

State's national prestige and visions of competing in either the NCAA or National Invitation Tournament in New York later this month serve only to make it a more inviting target for its upset-minded neighborhood rivals.

The twenty-seventh renewal of this classic calls for four games tomorrow. The program gets under way at 2:15 with fourth-seeded South Carolina, 12-5 in the conference, meeting Duke's 9-7 squad.

TONIGHT'S PAIRINGS

2:15—South Carolina vs. Duke.
4:00—Wake Forest vs. G.W.
7:30—N. C. State vs. V. P. I.
9:00—N. Carolina vs. W. & M.

8700 See Caps Bow, 76-75, at Raliegh, N. C.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Raleigh, N. C., March 1.—The Washington Caps changed their NBA locale tonight, but it didn't affect the usual result.

Chicago's Stags won a furiously fought 76-75 decision before 8700 spectators at Reynolds Coliseum who were sitting in on the pro league's first game in North Carolina.

(The second of a two-game series between the Caps and Stags will be held tonight at Uline Arena.)

The Caps were pressing hard at the finish but Chick Reiser lost possession of the ball driving in for what could have been the winning basket. Chicago recovered and its 1-point lead stood up.

Don Otten, 7-foot Cap center, was high man with 23 points although he missed five of 20 free throw attempts. Freddie Scolari was runnerup with 18 and Reiser had 15.

Bones McKinney, unable to play for the home folk because of a fractured right hand, was on hand for a personal tribute. A collection was taken up at halftime and McKinney was presented with $140.

Need That Hurler

Yanks Again Cast Eye at Scarborough

By Joe Reichler

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 1 (AP).—The New York Yankees once again are making strong overtures for Pitcher Ray Scarborough of the Washington Senators.

Stengel believes he has mighty fine trading material in Infielders George Stirnweiss and Billy Johnson, Outfielders Johnny Lindell and Gene Woodling and Catchers Gus Niarhos and Ralph Houk.

"I can't understand some of those other managers, especially on second division clubs," Casey complained.

"What have they got to lose? Everybody knows that strong reserves won the pennant for the Yankees last year. Yet when we offer some of those reserves to them they shy off. If I were in their shoes, I'd waste little time grabbing some of the Yankee surplus."

Come, Come, Griff; That's Harsh Talk

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—Clark Griffith is uninterested in "any of those palookas" the Yankees are reported to have offered him for Pitcher Ray Scarborough.

"I haven't talked trade with the Yankees since December and they're having a pipe-dream if they say they have made me any new offers for Scarborough," said Griffith.

"Those Yankee bench-warmers Casey Stengel says he has for trade couldn't come close to making my Washington team," added Griffith. ROVICH.

Leo Mogus, who made five of Philadelphia's 10 field goals in the third period, was the game's leading scorer with 27 points. Joe Fulk was shut out.

'Koiby' Has Fast Ball and a Prayer

Higbe 'Signs With Lord' as Well as Giants, Promises He'll Lead Revival in Baseball

PHOENIX, ARIZ., MARCH 1 (U.P.).—Pitcher Kirby "Koiby" Higbe who said he has signed a contract with the Lord "as well as the New York Giants," said today he would try to spread the words of Christ throughout baseball this season.

"I don't know how I'll go about it," he said. "I'm no preacher, but I'll do all I can."

Higbe, who joined his teammates for spring training here late today, said he signed a contract with the Lord after a half-hour talk with Evangelist Billy Graham in Columbia, S. C., last week.

"Billy's a good preacher and a fine fellow," the Giant relief hurler said. "I went to all his meetings in Columbia and signed a 'decision' card before I left."

Giants Manager Leo Durocher took a practical viewpoint of Higbe's "decision."

"If it helps his pitching, I'll send for this Graham fellow immediately," quipped the Lip.

The Giant pitcher, who went to the New York Club last June after six seasons with Brooklyn, explained the "decision" card signified that he had "accepted Christ as the Saviour."

Higbe said he was attracted to Graham's "Crusade for Christ" at Township Auditorium on Columbia, his home town, "because I've always been interested in religion."

"I wanted to hear Billy preach and never felt so wonderful in my life as I did after meeting him," Higbe said. "Koiby" said he was uncertain how he would approach his Giant teammates, but added he was reading his Bible and probably would have more to say later.

"Ball players are a good bunch and easy to talk to," Higbe said. "Besides, I guess a lot of them

Death Scores Near-Miss

Smitty One-Man Coast Guard in Bay Drama

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

IF YOU'VE been reading my stuff for laughs, I recommend you turn to comics this morning.

Haight

Seven months late, but better late than never, I want to pay homage to a hero. Perhaps his feat was performed only on the fringe of sportsdom. However, he deserves as big a hand as if he had hit a homer with three on, sunk a 25-foot putt on the last hole or dashed 85 yards to a touchdown.

Smitty didn't save a match or a game but he did save human lives.

When tragedy strikes we hear or read about it but when death scores a near-miss its seldom news.

So it was with Smitty and a drama that could be dubbed "Chesapeake Bay Fury." In this case, the actors were playing for keeps.

The story begins with a Washington man who owns a summer place at Franklin Manor, Md., building a boat. Three friends helped him and it was a happy morning when they launched the craft on the rippled surface of Herron Bay.

The outboard motor was attached and they were soon on their way to the fishing grounds. The hardheads were biting and they made a sizeable catch before returning to shore for lunch.

The wind whipped up a bit from the Southeast in the early afternoon but somebody suggested it would "die down", so they again chugged toward the fishing spot.

But the wind did not slacken. Instead it blew half a gale with the waves growing with every rush of a whitecap.

As they attempted to turn to return to land, a mountainous wave broke into the boat and flipped it bottom up, dumping life preservers, fishing gear and everything including the fishermen into the water.

All hands were successful in grabbing hold of the upturned boat. The three who could swim, more or less boosted the lone nonswimmer onto the top of the craft.

The wind was blowing toward the shore but the boat was drifting only slowly due to the dragging of the anchor which had fallen to the bottom when the boat overturned.

A duck blind was between them and the shore but when some 25 yards away, the anchor caught and the boat became stationary. The three swimmers, tired from gripping the boat, decided to strike out for the blind and they made it, leaving the fourth still on the upturned boat.

For two hours, the three on the blind tried to attract attention from the shore about a quarter of a mile away.

Finally, Ralph Murdock, our outdoor columnist, in the yard some 300 yards back from the bay, thought he heard voices, went to the shore to investigate and discovered the plight of the fishermen.

Murdock organized a rescue party. By this time the waves were mountain high and a big whitecap drowned the motor of the second boat, forcing the would-be rescuers back to shore.

Three men were still on the blind and another was clinging to the top of the boat when Smitty, who lives just off the shore, came home from work.

He sized up the situation, donned his trunks, waded out as far as he could and swam, against terrific sea, to the topsy-turvy craft. He held on with one hand and freed the anchor from the bottom with the other, allowing the boat to drift again.

This time it reached shallow water and Smitty was able to carry the weary fisherman to shore.

Meantime, Murdock had phoned Shadyside, Md., for a large motorboat to get the trio off the blind.

Once again Smitty entered the foaming water, this time swimming to the duck blind and returning with the smallest man. He was about to go back after another, when the big boat appeared.

Then Murdock proved a good friend, but a poor reporter. He allowed the four fishermen, who said their wives would never let them go fishing again, and Smitty, who didn't want his name in the paper, to talk him out of writing the story.

I made no promise to Smitty. He is Charles B. Smith, who now lives with his wife and two children, in Woodmoor, Md., and is in charge of the Electronics Section of the Engineering Research Corp., at Riverdale, Md.

Worms Are Out

Artificial Lures Only, Catoctin Rule

By Ralph Murdock

FRESH WATER anglers, here's your set-up on trout fishing in the Catoctin Recreational Demonstration Area, National Park Service at Thurmont, Md.

Murdock

G. B. Williams, custodian of the park, outlines the regulations as follows: first the waters in the Catoctin area you must procure a Maryland fishing license. The open season starts on April 15 and terminates on July 15. Fishing is permitted only between the hours of 5:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.

The catch or creel limit of trout shall be five fish per day, all of which must be the legal length in conformance with the law. There's only one spot in the area where all fishing is prohibited—it is Little Hunting Creek. All other waters are open to anglers.

Last but not least is this restriction: fishing with other than artificial flies—no worms, that is—is also prohibited in or on all waters, except Owen Creek.

THE ALL-AROUND championship trap shoot was conducted by the Berwyn Rod and Gun Club ended with Jack Pearce high gun when he broke 119 of 150 targets. The event was for members only and lasted two days. High winds, which reached a velocity of 45 miles an hour at times, played havoc with the shooters. Forty-five members participated in the 150 target event.

The runner-up was Art Krites who nailed 112 birds out of a possible 150. Krites also won the 19-yard handicap by smearing 41 out of 50 clay pigeons. The 16-yard championship, another 50 target affair, was captured by Alex McDonald when he plastered 49 birds.

The Berwyn Rod and Gun Club will have an exhibit in the Sportsmen's and Outdoor's Show which opens at 5 p. m. on Friday. The opening night will be cosponsored by the Touchdown Club of Washington.

know more about religion than I could tell them."

Following their meeting in Columbia, Graham quoted Higbe as saying he wanted the whole world to know he was going to live for Jesus Christ.

"That's right," Higbe said. "From what Billy told me, it all adds up to living a good Christian life."

Higge, a churchgoer all his life, was asked if prayers had ever helped him out of a tight spot on the diamond.

"Sure, a few prayers will help anyone when the going gets tough," he replied.

St. John's, Eastern Also Bid for Title

By West McLean
Post Reporter

The Metropolitan Basketball Tournament enters the semifinal round at College Park tonight with St. John's meeting Eastern in the first game of a double-header and George Washington High of Alexandria clashing with McKinley Tech in the nightcap.

The winners of tonight's game meet in the finals tomorrow night. Starting time tonight is 7:30 o'clock.

G. W.'s Presidents, defending champions, are meeting the strongest threat to the retention of their crown in Tech, the Interhigh league's top team.

Tech has won nine in a row and G. W. eight straight. The winner of tonight's game will be favored to pick up the tourney crown in the following night's championship game.

Tech won a regular season game between the two, 48-45, on the McKinley court a month ago.

Tech will have to stop Erwin Jones and Bob Kessler, the Presidents' one-two punch, who both work in the pivot slot.

G. W. on the other hand will have its hands full with Tony Sgro, Tech's driving forward, and Richie Gaskell, a guard who is adept at grabbing the rebounds.

The Cadets of St. John's will be favored to repeat over Eastern, having beaten the Ramblers two months ago, 52-46.

Dear Folks: Apprentice Jockey Sam Boulmetis is setting the pace for the riders at Hialeah and his 5-pound allowance is a factor in his lead over Journeyman Jockey Ted Atkinson. However, Terrific Ted is still the tops when it comes right down to figuring saddle ability. For instance, Atkinson is the head man when it comes to riding 2-year-olds, a real test. Nursing speed out of the baby racers over the three-furlong course requires plenty of skill and Ted has that in heaps. Speaking of juveniles, Starter Harold Holland, who has been schooling at Charles Town since February 15, reports that there's an unusually large number of 2-year-olds at the West Virginia track. Thanks to the open weather, they will be fit for early debuts. Only two more days—Charles Town opens Saturday.—BILL.

American U. Is Favored In Tourney

Baltimore, March 1 (AP).—This is the basketball era of high-scoring individuals, but a good team will be the favorite in the Mason-Dixon Conference tournament starting tomorrow night.

American U. has no Nick Scallion, Bob Anderson or Art Press to monopolize the scoring column. But the Eagles have been tabbed the team to beat in the tenth annual tourney at Loyola College.

They showed during the season that five consistent, if not sky high, scorers still make a winning combination. American U. had no point-getter to match Washington College's Scallion who averaged 24.8 a game, or Western Maryland's Press with a 21 average or Loyola's Anderson with 19.8.

Instead they had a quintet all contributing respectable amounts. There was Leroy Ishman and Sherwood Webster averaging around 15. Ronnie Garshag and Bob Lamon were good for about 10 a game. And Art Morales for around nine.

American's first conference foe is Baltimore U. (at 7:05 p. m.). The Baltimore quintet gained the eighth and last qualifying place Tuesday night by defeating Catholic U. in a playoff.

TONIGHT'S PAIRINGS

5:30—Hampden - Sydney vs. Towson.

7:05—American vs. Baltimore.

8:45—Loyola vs. Bridgewater.

10:15—Wash. vs. Roanoke.

Priory Rally Buries Landon

Landon blew a six-point lead in the last eight minutes and lost a 48-32 basketball game to Priory yesterday at the Landon gym. It was Priory's last game and boosted the Panthers' record to 17-8.

Landon led, 21-15, at halftime, and 27-21, going into the last quarter. Then Priory got hot and outscored the Bears, 27-5.

Institute Fete Marks Record Sales in 1949

By S. Oliver Goodman

Leaders of the industry which sold you a record 47 million dollars worth of household electric appliances in 1949 celebrated last night in the Shoreham Hotel.

More than 350 members of the Electric Institute of Washington and their guests saw F. Charles Ruling installed as president for the coming year, succeeding Harry C. Lease. Ruling said that the Institute's annual report will be in the hands of members this week.

In addition to record sales, the report will show these facts:

Washington with seven tenths of 1 percent of the Nation's population bought 1 percent of all electric appliances last year.

Twelve and seven-tenths percent of Potomac Electric Power Co.'s residential customers bought television sets in 1949.

An estimated 75,000 persons visited the showrooms of the Electric Institute last year, more than doubling the previous year.

General chairman of last night's affair, which was the sixteenth annual meeting of the institute, was Joe Kaemmerer.

HONOR: Albert L. Neveux, jr., was honored at the annual banquet last night of the George A. Hatzes Agency of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co. at the Manor Country Club. Neveux, supervisor of the Washington agency since 1942, recently was promoted to general agent of Fidelity at Richmond, effective March 15. George N. Charuhas and August W. Beck were given awards as leading producers for 1949.

NEW DIRECTOR: Leopold V. Freudberg has been elected a director of Liberty National Bank, President W. T. Vandoren announced yesterday. Freudberg succeeds Frederick G. Macarow, an official of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., who has been transferred to New York. Freudberg, prominent in the insurance field and civic activities, is president of the Woodward Realty Corp. and the Chillum Heights Apartments Co. He is also a member of the bar.

ODD LOTS: Record passenger loads of National Airlines this winter are due to lower fares and new selling techniques, President G. T. Baker said at a press conference yesterday in the Carlton Hotel . . . A. De Pinna Co., whose control was recently acquired by Julius Garfinckel & Co., failed to take action on common stock dividend but declared the usual quarterly dividend of 15 cents a share on preferred stock . . . American Express Co. will observe its 100th anniversary on March 18 . . . Beg pardon: Charles F. Holden operates an investment brokerage business in Alexandria with direct wire connections to Mackall & Coe in Washington. This column stated yesterday that Johnston, Lemon & Co. was "the first" to offer complete investment services in Alexandria.

BOOKED: The American Savings & Loan Institute's 600 members will hold their annual convention in Washington in 1953. This was reported yesterday by William E. Poulton, vice president and treasurer of Columbia Federal Savings & Loan Association, who recently returned from the institute's meeting in Chicago. Poulton was elected second vice president of the group which puts him in line for the presidency in 1952. Raymond C. Williams, another local savings-loan leader, was elected a trustee of the institute, in charge of District 4.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: J. P. Stedenmouder of Lansburgh's has been elected vice president of District 12 of the National Retail Credit Association . . . F. F. Crabbs, Washington executive general agent for the Burlington Lines from 1935 to 1946, has become assistant freight traffic manager at St. Louis . . . Robert A. Ferber has been named head of the Baltimore office of American Bridge Co. . . . John P. Dugan retired yesterday as manager of the Baltimore & Ohio's mail, express and baggage traffic after 56 years service. He is succeeded by Theodore J. Younker . . . Thomas L. Crowell, jr. and Charles B. Cooke have been elected vice presidents of Ford, Bacon & Davis, Inc., engineers-constructors.

Senate Committee Tells OHE to Forbid Further Accumulation of Leave

LEAVE CRACKDOWN: There has been a lot of talk, but the first definite step to restrict annual leave for Federal workers has been taken in Congress.

It was completely overlooked at the time, but the Senate Appropriations Committee has instructed the Office of the Housing Expediter to forbid its employes from accumulating additional annual leave.

It went further, in fact, by adopting a rider, now before the Senate, to prevent any OHE employe from building up additional annual leave in the period from January 1 to June 30, the day set by the committee for OHE liquidation. In other words, the 4100 OHE employes will have to take 1950 leave as they earn it or else lose it. The leave provision was made a rider to the deficiency bill, which is slated to be taken up in the Senate within a few days.

Here's a tip—don't underestimate the significance of the leave rider. Something similar to it may be adopted for all Federal agencies. Several Senators are reported to have such an idea.

Incidentally, OHE would not have enough money to liquidate and no funds for operations if Congress limited it to the $2,600,000 recommended by the Senate committee. The cost of paying off accumulated annual leave is estimated at $2,815,000.

Marjorie Cecil Johnston has been appointed an assistant specialist in the Office of Education . . . The Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday approved the nomination of Dr. Roy V. Peel to be director of the Census Bureau . . . Capt. Alfred C. Richmond has been nominated to be assistant commandant of the Coast Guard with the rank of rear admiral. He handles the agency's budget and other administrative operations . . .

Myron Wiener has been appointed to the War Claims Commission. He is a former judge on a United States Court in Shanghai, and has a law office here and in New York.

Representative Burdick (R., N. D.), has introduced a bill to allow Federal workers to retire after 30 years of service regardless of age . . . Dr. Joseph R. PROTEST: A delegation of AFL bigwigs headed by President William Green yesterday called on the President to protest the Postoffice's mail-handler order. The President was told that work of postal clerks was being assigned to the lower-paid mail handlers. Mr. Truman promised to look into the matter. Leo George of AFL's Clerks, and William Doherty of AFL's Letter Carriers, were among those who attended the conference.

DECLINE: Federal employment took another sizable drop during January, to its lowest level since March, 1942.

Civil Service counted a grand total of 1,948,900 as of February 1, a decline of 30,600 below the January 1 figure. In this country were 1,799,900 employes.

Postoffice reported 23,000 fewer employes. Substantial reductions also were made by Army and Navy. Treasury was the only agency to have a large increase, mainly in Internal Revenue.

In and near this city, Government employment in the executive branch declined 500 during January to 212,700. Veterans Administration reported 800 fewer workers because of its big reduction of temporary workers on the GI dividend project. The Army Department laid off 400 employes, while the Treasury took on 300 and 26 agencies each reported minor increases.

Brush Fire Razes 5-Mile Fairfax Area

Blaze Threatening Engleside School Is Battled for 7 Hours by 300

Fanned by strong and erratic winds, a brush fire yesterday burned out a five-mile-square area in Fairfax County, near Engleside, Va.

In the seven hours before it was finally brought under control, it threatened the Engleside community and came close to a Coast Guard radio testing station. The blaze came within a block of the Mount Vernon High School at one point and less than a mile of a drive-in theater at another.

Three hundred persons, including volunteers from Fort Belvoir, and fighters from five fire companies fought the blaze from 2 until 9 p. m. when it was brought under control.

A small section of the 5-mile-square area was still smouldering after 9 p. m., but it was in a section already burned out.

The fire was one of more than 60 in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia yesterday. Arlington County alone had 31 brush blazes.

At 9 p. m., a Capital Airline pilot flying over Herndon, Va., reported a "plane" on fire. Investigation by police discovered it was merely another brush fire.

The Fairfax County fire—largest of them all—began when a capricious wind spread a trash fire on the farm of Clarence Talbert, on Telegraph rd., to an adjacent hayfield.

It spread until it covered a section four miles south of both Alexandria and the intersection of Telegraph and Franconia rds.

At 7 p. m., when firemen thought it was under control, winds threatened to blow it towards the Coast Guard station. Firemen quickly extinguished the new outbreak.

At another point, four bulldozers were used in the Engleside area to clear out a swath of land to save the small town.

One fireman was overcome by smoke. He was Raymond Miller, 27, who lives at the Penn Daw firehouse. Miller was treated at the scene.

Fire equipment came from Bailey's Crossroads, Penn Daw, Franconia, Mount Vernon, and the No. 1 Rescue Squad from Alexandria.

In the Belts section of Prince Georges County, a brush fire burned out 25 acres on the Agriculture Department's experimental farm station.

Fire Capt. Carl Leser, 25, of Branchville, suffered burns about the eyes while fighting a blaze at the Beltville Curve. This fire threatened a garage and small house around the curve. Leser was treated at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale.

A third Prince Georges County fire, near the Berwyn School, caused $1000 damage when it spread to a garage containing concrete materials.

Producers Offer 1-Cent Cut in Milk Prices Here

Suggestion Counters Plea by Dairies For 1½-Cent Slice Effective April 1

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association yesterday proposed a 1-cent a quart cut in the price of milk April 1 instead of an immediate 1½ cent reduction asked by three major area dairies.

The two propasals were made at an all-day hearing of the Virginia Milk Commission in Alexandria. The commission sets milk prices for the nearby Virginia area, which are almost always followed by dairies in the District and nearby Maryland.

Three individual milk producers, going beyond the stand of their association, asserted that no price cut was justified at this time, because of the high cost of running dairy farms.

Take Plan Under Study

The commission took the proposals under advisement, and Virgil P. Randolph, jr., acting chairman, said rebuttal arguments could be filed up to March 11, eliminating any possibility of an immediate price change.

The dairies' proposal also included a 69-cent cut in the present wholesale price of $6.44 per hundredweight, including premiums, paid by the dairies to the producers, while the producers' association asked for a 44-cent reduction instead. These reductions would approximately equal the retail price cuts asked.

It was revealed during the hearing that the producers' association had offered local dairies milk for as low as $3.50 a hundredweight, to be sold to Federal and District institutions and military installations.

Asks Commission Study

Robert H. Rawlins, production manager of Thompson's Dairy, one of those asking for the 1½ cent cut, asked the commission to study these offers of cut-price milk in view of statements made by dairy farmers at the hearing that they need the present $6.44 price to pay their costs.

Rawlins said dairy farmers' costs were 11.5 percent lower than they were in November, 1947, when the Virginia commission set the present wholesale price. Milk production in this market was 20,000 gallons a day higher in January than in January of last year, he said. There is now a surplus, he said.

Similar arguments were used by Maurice Davison, vice president of Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, and Michael H. Burchell, secretary-treasurer of the Alexandria Dairy Products Co.

Near Capitol
Police Raid H St. Still, Arrest Two

Metropolitan Police and a Treasury Agent yesterday swooped down on a barn at the rear of 120 G st. sw., where they arrested two brothers operating a 100-gallon still.

Charged on four counts of making illegal whisky were Melvin Pannell, 31, and Roland Pannell, 28, both of 128 Brown ct. sw. They were released under $2000 bond each after arraignment before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

The Pannells told police they had been operating about a month, selling the corn whisky at $20 for six half-gallon jugs.

Police destroyed 20 barrels of mash—about 600 gallons—and confiscated 36 empty jugs.

Because the raiders said they could smell the mash "cooking" from outside the barn, they did not apply for warrants.

When police broke into the still, on the second floor of the barn, the whisky was just beginning to distill, they said.

$1037 Stolen From Payroll Of Contractor

It was payday yesterday—$1037 worth, to be exact—for the thief (or maybe it should be plural) who slipped into a contractor's building, at 4300 Harewood rd. ne., yesterday.

Irons & Reynolds, Inc., who are building the new John Carroll High School at the Harewood rd. site, had assembled a $1900 payroll yesterday.

Some of the pay envelopes had been distributed. The others, containing $1037 in cash, were in the paymaster's office in a temporary building.

John J. McDermott, vice president of the building firm, said that the timekeeper, Richard Merrell, locked the remaining pay envelopes in the bottom drawer of a filing cabinet shortly before noon.

At 1:20 p. m. it was discovered that the filing cabinet had been broken open and the pay envelopes taken.

In another complaint Mrs. Dorothy A. Schwertner reported to police that her home, at 1910 Randolph st. ne., was broken into early yesterday.

The thief, she said, took $18 and her house and automobile keys from her purse. He then used the auto keys to drive off in Mrs. Schwertner's 1941 black Buick sedan, which had been parked in front of the house. The car is still missing.

$268,977 Bid Low for Sesqui Amphitheater

Commission Expected To Grant Funds for Rock Creek Project

E. L. Daniels, an Arlington contractor, submitted the low bid of $268,977 for construction work on the 4000-seat Rock Creek Amphitheater, National Capital Parks said yesterday.

Funds for the amphitheater, to be constructed in Rock Creek Park northwest of 16th st. and Colorado ave. nw., are expected to be allotted by the Sesquicentennial Commission.

Bids have already been opened for paving of the parking area and access roads, and concreting the seating area.

Sesqui Cancellations On Mail Inaugurated

Washington Sesquicentennial cancellations on mail was inaugurated yesterday at a brief ceremony in the main Post Office building at Union Station Plaza.

All letters passing through the cancellation machines at the Washington Post Office during the Sesqui year will bear the slogan: "National Capital Sesquicentennial 1800 1950."

Susan Fowler, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Fowler of Takoma Park, Md., handed the first envelopes yesterday to Postmaster Roy M. Norton for the new cancellation.

They were addressed in this order: to President Truman; to King George VI of England, since the death of President Roosevelt the world's leading stamp collector; Princess Elizabeth of England, also a stamp collector, and Postmaster General of the United States Jesse Donaldson.

Similar envelopes are being presented to the Library of Congress and National Archives.

Some 400 persons attended the ceremony, at which Representative Horan (R., Wash.), a member of the Sesquicentennial Commission, spoke.

Fire Causes $10,000 Damage To Bowling Alley

Three pinboys, asleep in the Lucky Strike Bowling Alleys at 1729 14th st. nw., early yesterday morning, were rescued when fire broke out in the second-floor alleys.

Firemen estimated damage to the alleys and a furniture store below at $10,000. Thick smoke hampered the firefighters who took almost three hours to extinguish the flames.

The fire was discovered when one of the boys was awakened by an explosion and called the Fire Department.

Rev. Creaghan Named GU Department Head

The Rev. John S. Greaghan, S. J., has been named head of the Georgetown College of Arts and Sciences English department, it was announced yesterday by the collebe's Dean, The Rev. Edward G. Jacklin, S. J.

Fr. Creaghan succeeds Professor Bernard M. Wagner, 3900 Cathedral ave. nw., who has retired because of ill health. Professor Wagner, who has held the post since 1939, will remain as professor. Fr. Creaghan formerly was chairman of the Classics department.

Falls Church School Site Poses Problem

Steep Grades Of Street in Plans Hit by Architect

A paper street, dedicated but never built on a proposed primary school site, last night posed a problem for the Falls Church School Board.

Site of the proposed school is the 7.5-acre Daniel tract in Fairfax County on Great Falls and Woodland sts., near the city limits.

Architects John Graham told the board that, because of steep grades on other portions of the site, the ideal location of the proposed school would overlap part of the proposed street.

The School Board also: appointed John Johnson to head a committee to study school problems in the annexable area, and learned the city council wants to build tennis courts on a new high school site off Leesburg Pike near Haycock rd.

Dr. Cox Named GWU Professor Of Ophthalmology

Appointment of Dr. Ronald Atmore Cox as professor of ophthalmology at George Washington University School of Medicine here was announced yesterday.

In his new position, Dr. Cox will also serve as executive officer of the school's department of ophthalmology services at GWU Hospital. In all positions, he succeeds Dr. Ernest A. W. Sheppard, who resigned to spend more time on research.

Graves Guarded
Alexandria Church Votes Parish Hall

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

A resounding majority of members of the historic Christ Church in Alexandria, where George Washington once worshiped, last night voted to erect a new parish hall in the southeast corner of the churchyard.

The plans were attacked Monday by Mrs. Robert M. Reese, a church member and belonging to the city's Board of Architectural Review, as desecration of ancient graves, and obscuring the view of the 183-year-old church from North Washington st.

The parishioners last night, by a vote of 169 to 9, directed the church vestry to build the hall, and to borrow up to $120,000 against church real estate security for this purpose.

The meeting was marked principally by an expression of views by Mrs. Reese and the Rev. B. B. Comer Lile, rector. He favored the project.

Mrs. Reese, after reiterating her charges that the building would interfere with at least 10 or 12 of the 311 graves in the churchyard, declared:

"I just feel you might as well bid Alexandria goodbye if this building is put where the plans indicate. If this thing is done, Christ Church will be criticized from one end of the land to the other."

Dr. Lile challenged the statement on the graves, citing aged vestry records indicating "it is possible and quite probable that no bodies were ever interred in the southeast corner of the yard."

He also pointed out that at present there is an 80 degree view of the church from North Washington st. The erection of the parish hall would reduce this by only 18 degrees, he said.

To assure parishoners that no desecration would be involved in the construction, Dr. Lile said a special historian superintendent of excavation will "watch every shovelful of dirt," and if he sees any signs of a body, he will blow his whistle and the digging will be halted until an inspection is concluded.

Any bodies uncovered would be reinterred elsewhere in the churchyard with proper markers placed over the graves, he promised. The plans for the hall were approved by the Board of Architectural Review last Thursday, with Mrs. Reese in opposition.

Montgomery Road Project Is Denounced

Opponents' Meeting Hears 'Gold Plated' Highways Scored

Four hundred persons last night heard the proposed Montgomery County road construction code denounced as a plan for "gold-plated roads" which residents could not afford.

The meeting to arouse opposition to the code—which calls for higher standards for roads, particularly in residential subdivisions, and affects trees, curbs and sidewalks—was called by the Home Owners' Protective Association of Montgomery County, and held in the Silver Spring National Guard Armory.

Don E. Gingery, association chairman, a builder, and a member of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, was the first of eight speakers.

Gingery, who said he did not speak as a member of the commission, said that County Council had refused the association's request that a hearing on the proposed code be delayed, and set it for 9 a. m. March 11.

"Four and a-half weeks is not long enough to study this complicated code," he said.

David E. Best, a Rockville attorney, said "we are for adequate roads, but we don't want to go beyond that and bankrupt homes"

"This ordnance will apply to roads in subdivisions," Best said. "and here is the code's definition of 'a subdivision: 'The division or partition of a lot, tract or parcel of land into two or more lots.' Do you have any rural roads in Montgomery County under this definition of subdivision?" he asked.

Seward Mott, Urban Land Institute's research director, said:

"There is the danger of overimproving. The ordinance goes beyond the requirements for residential subdivisions—every road shouldn't be built as if it were an arterial highway."

Page Hopkins, president of the Prince Georges-Montgomery County Engineers Society, said it was the opinion of that group that the county already had good roads.

Edward Foster, a Montgomery County attorney, said the code would make the cost of new homes prohibitive for the average veteran.

Lyle Lipscomb, a District bond and insurance expert and Roland Bourgeois, a road builder, spoke from specialized points of view. Roger J. Whiteford, Washington and Silver Spring attorney and final speaker, said the proposed code had been originated by "a group of theorists who want to spent your money to serve their own ignorant idealism."

2 Men Sentenced To Penitentiary In Arlington

Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy yesterday gave penitentiary sentences to two men.

Sentenced to two years was Edgar George Gaudet, 18, who pleaded guilty to stealing a truck from the Modern Cleaners, Inc., 2213 N. Pershing dr.

Also sentenced to two years was James Williams, 21, of 1423 Simms dr. se., who pleaded guilty to breaking into the Acme Market at 1746Lee highway and stealing 43 cartons of cigarettes January 6.

Car Driven by Senator Slightly Injures Girl

A car driven by Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) struck Loretta Gray, 11, of 2417 F st. nw., at 7 p. m. Tuesday at 21st st. and Virginia ave. nw., according to police.

Police said the girl and three girl friends dashed across the street outside of the crosswalk. The child was treated at George Washington University Hospital for leg injuries and released.

K. W. Spencer, D. C. Employe, Named to Vacant PUC Post

Kenneth W. Spencer, 49, member of the District Board of Real Estate Assessor, yesterday was nominated by President Truman to membership on the District Public Utilities Commission.

If confirmed by the Senate, Spencer will fill the position vacant since last November when James W. Lauderdale resigned to return to private law practice. Lauderdale's three-year term expires June 30.

An employe of the District for 16 years, Spencer is a valuation engineer. He has spent the last 27 years appraising utilities, railroads and other business propertier.

Since 1942 his job has been to assess utilities and business properties in the District as one of the five-man board of assessors. Before that he had served eight years on the PUC staff as a valuation engineer and analyst.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan, who was appointed to the PUC shortly before Spencer left its staff, said he was "very pleased" by the appointment.

"My personal experience with Mr. Spencer," he said, "convinces me of his qualifications for the work of the commission and of his honesty and integrity."

Spencer was one of about 10 persons who had been candidates for the job.

Born in Zanesville, Ohio, but a resident of the District most of the time since 1903, Spencer holds a degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Michigan.

Fay's Assistant Quits Day Before Being Named in Divorce

J. Leon Williams, 36, has resigned as Assistant United States Attorney here following an official investigation of his conduct, United States Attorney George Morris Fay disclosed yesterday.

Williams

Fay said that Williams was suspended February 8 and that his resignation was accepted last Friday. According to a Justice Department spokesman, Williams stated in his letter of resignation that he desired to enter the private practice of law.

Williams was named Saturday as co-respondent in a divorce suit charging a woman with adultery, but Fay declined to state whether the charge had anything to do with the resignation.

"We received a complaint from a citizen about Williams and suspended him pending an investigation. We never disclose the contents of such a complaint," Fay said.

Williams could not be reached for comment either at his law office or at his home. He had been described as a friend of Associate Justice Tom C. Clark of the United States Supreme Court.

Early last month, Williams denied to reporters that there was any truth to rumors that he was a wrongdoer. He said that he intended to take a "leave of absence" unrelated to the charges.

Judge Urges Criminal Action To Snag Runaway Husbands

Judge Matthew F. McGuire would like to see more deserting husbands prosecuted criminally for leaving their wives and children in need.

The District Court jurist lashed out at the prevailing "social problem" which has developed. He now is trying divorce cases and notes that in a number of cases, husbands are violating the law without punishment.

"I don't see why the United States Attorney doesn't prosecute in this kind of case. He ought to bring some of these fellows back to stop this situation," he said.

The case causing the comment was a limited divorce suit for cruelty in which Mrs. Elizabeth J. MacNichol, 26, 3335 C st. se., accused Bruce MacNichol, 27, of leaving her and a small son in necessitous circumstances by deserting her in 1948. His last known address was Houston, Tex., she said.

The judge pointed out that under the law a husband can be sentenced for nonsupport to serve a year in jail and pay a $500 fine. He said that as a divorce judge, he could do no more than grant a limited decree and award Mrs. MacNichol $100 a month maintenance.

A Spokesman for the United States Attorney's office sad that some absconding husbands are prosecuted. They are hailed before Juvenile Court when they remain in Washington. Otherwise, they are prosecuted in District Court.

He said that in a number of cases prosecution would not solve the problem. This is especially true, he said where the husband agrees to support his wife when contacted by law officers.

School Absent Rate Called Unalarming

District school officials yesterday made sample studies of absentee rates in this period of colds and virus infections, and found them "high, but not alarming."

Dr. Carl Hansen, associate superintendent of schools who made the check, said the number of absent yesterday ranged from 17 to 25 percent in eight elementary schools. The absentee rate normally runs about 9 percent now, he said.

A few kindergarten classes are having only 50 percent attendance, he reported, with absentee rates in the first two grades ranging almost as high.

Sharp Fluctuations Noted

One "half full" report yesterday was turned in for the Emery Elementary School, Lincoln rd. and R st. ne., for its kindergarten and first-grade classes. Miss Grace Lind, school divisional director, said the absent rate rises and falls rapidly.

This was further borne out by the report of Miss Grace Bush, principal at the Noyes Elementary School, 10th and Franklin sts. ne. At her school, she said, 50 percent of the kindergarten class was out on Monday. But yesterday, the absentee rate in the class was 33 percent.

Elementary schools checked by Dr. Hansen, and their absentee rates, were: Brightwood, 19 percent; Buchanan, 25; Cooke, 23; Janney, 20; Patterson, 17; Raymond, 21; Thompson, 23, and Tyler, 18 percent.

Arlington Situation Better

In Arlington, Va., where the first outbreak of a mild influenza closed one school ahead of the Washington Birthday holiday, school absenteeism appeared to be slowly subsiding, officials said. The same encouraging report was given by health officers of Alexandria and Fairfax County.

Public health investigators from the National Institutes of Health investigated the outbreak at Arlington's Woodmont Elementary School, and reported finding an "influenza-like" virus. The ailment appeared to be a mild form of flu, they reported.

Heart Patients

1500 Invalids Called Fit for Job Therapy

The District has some 1500 bed or chair-bound victims of heart disease who might benefit by occupational or vocational therapy, it was estimated yesterday.

Dr. Bernard J. Walsh, chief cardiologist for the District Health Department, made the estimate for doctors, therapists and social workers meeting on heart-disease rehabilitation problems, at the Federal Security Building.

Workshop Contemplated

He also disclosed that the Washington Heart Association hopes some day to expand its present program of home training for heart patients to include a Community Workshop. Such a workshop, he said, would give convalescing patients a better chance to learn and plan for occupations within their restricted capabilities.

The 1500 estimate, Dr. Walsh said, includes only those heart-stricken persons of working age. It does not take into account the hundreds of children, mostly victims of rheumatic heart fever, who have been laid low by heart disease.

Earlier, Miss Myrtle Ince, director of social services at Providence Hospital here, estimated that of the hospital's 230 patients in its heart clinic and about 300 others being treated for high-blood pressure "about two thirds are not self-supporting."

Few References by Doctors

David Amato, chief of the D. C. Rehabilitation Office, said that few doctors were referring patients for vocational rehabilitation.

"Indicative of the small number of physicians who know and use this service is the fact that during fiscal 1948 only three percent of almost 1300 persons referred to us were referred by physicians," Amato declared.

The cardiac rehabilitation conference was sponsored jointly by the Washington Heart Association and the D. C. Rehabilitation Service, Office of Vocational Rehabilitation, Federal Security Agency.

P-TA Announces Scholarship Award

The District Congress of Parents and Teachers announced yesterday it will give a scholarship to cover expenses of a Washington high school graduate at Wilson Teachers College.

The scholarship fund of $100 will be offered this year for the academic term beginning in September. The student will be selected by a committee of parents and teachers on the basis of scholarship, personality, leadership, desire to teach and speaking ability. The award will be presented at the May 11 P-TA fellowship dinner.

Theater Unions' Officials to Meet With Engineers

Officials of several AFL unions with employes in Washington theaters will meet today at 11 a. m. with officers of Local 99, International Union of Operating Engineers (AFL) to discuss the strike of the local against six theaters.

The meeting will take place in the office of Clem Preller, president of the Central Labor Union, 720 5th st. nw., Jesse West, business agent of the engineers' local, said last night.

Present will be officials of the motion picture operators, stage employes, painters, decorators and paperhangers, doormen, ushers and cashiers and porters, janitors and matrons locals, West said.

The theaters involved are the Warner, Metropolitan, Tivoli, Capitol, Palace and Trans-Lux.

Crain Better, Transferred At Gallinger

Harry M. Crain, who was fired by the State Department when it was learned he was wanted in Colorado for embezzlement, was recovering yesterday from an overdose of sleeping capsules.

Crain, 51, was taken off the critical list at Gallinger Hospital and transferred from the medical to the psychiatric ward.

Trouble began Monday night for Crain, who on February 20 had been sworn in as a State Department foreign service staff officer and was slated for assignment to Korea.

At the request of the sheriff of Jefferson County, Colo., Washington police arrested Crain at the Claridge Hotel where he was registered with his wife, Maurine.

Crain was freed in $1000 bond, then dropped from sight. He was found 17 hours later, unconscious, in a room at the Hamilton Hotel. He had penned a farewell note to his wife and then taken the sleeping capsules.

According to Colorado authorities, Crain left the faculty of the Colorado School of Mines three weeks ago after serving two years as associate professor of English. After his departure, they said, a $2400 shortage was discovered in student funds he administered.

Purim, Jewish Deliverance Fete To Be Celebrated Tonight

Purim, Jewish festival of deliverance, will begin at sundown today and be concluded at sundown Friday.

The festival, one of the most joyous in the Jewish year, commemorates the deliverance of the ancient Jews of Persia from a massacre through the intervention of Queen Esther.

In homes and synagogues the Scroll of Esther, which tells the story, will be read. Children at the Hebrew Academy will present a play telling of the Queen's heroism today and Friday.

Special observances for men in the armed services will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at Walter Reed Hospital and at 8 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center, 1529 16th st. nw., both sponsored by the Jewish Welfare Board.

Queen Esther will be chosen at the Purim Ball at 8:45 p. m. Saturday in the Cafritz Auditorium of the Jewish Community Center. Judges will be Bill Gold of The Washington Post, Ruth Crane of WMAL and Martha Strayer of the Washington Daily News.

Leopard Held Unlikely to Escape Here

It isn't likely to happen here.

This assurance was given yesterday by Washington Zoo Director William M. Mann to all Washingtonians who may have been made a bit jumpy by the escape of the leopard from the Oklahoma City Zoo.

Difference is that the leopard escaped from a pit. Leopards, thank heavens, aren't kept in pits at the Washington Zoo. They're behind bars, under padlock—in the Lion House.

"I'm afraid of leopards being kept outdoors," sagely said Doctor Mann.

Fact is, though, many zoos keep lions in pits, Doctor Mann said. Height of wall and moat give protection.

But leopards are much more active than lions, as that one in Oklahoma City demonstrated, establishing a new world's high jump record by going over that 18-foot wall from his pit. The leopard was recaptured after eating drugged meat, then died.

Mrs. Holmes Acquitted In Killing of Husband

Florence E. Holmes, 43, of 490 Casey ct. sw., yesterday was acquitted of charges of second degree murder in the fatal cutting of her husband, Tasco, last September 11.

Mrs. Holmes pleaded self defense. She told a District Court jury that her husband had struck her, and threatened her with a knife. The woman was defended by Attorney M. Edward Buckley, jr. Assistant United States Attorney Grace Stiles prosecuted the case before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

Miss Barlow and Scalley Confirmed by Senate

New Window At Cathedral Is Dedicated

The Very Rev. John W. Suter yesterday officiated at services of dedication for the new "Resurrection Window" at the Washington Cathedral.

Present for the ceremonies were Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Thickens of Menasha, Wisc., who donated the window to the cathedral.

Placed just inside the "Way of Peace" entrance to the cathedral crypts, the window depicts the resurrection of Christ. Its center panels show the scene of the angel at the tomb and women bearing spices.

Beneath the panels is a representation of human death, and the upper sections represent heaven, with figures of angels and cherubs.

The window is located at the spot where a funeral procession pauses while the pall is removed from the casket.

N. J. Takes Over Phone Facilities To Prevent Strike

Trenton, N. J., March 1 (U.P.).—Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll seized the facilities of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. at 11 a. m. today to prevent a strike of 12,000 CIO operators belonging to the Communications Workers of America.

The seizure automatically means compulsory arbitration, which the union hopes will set a pattern for eventual settlement of the Nation-wide telephone contract disputes. Either side can appeal the arbitration decision to the courts.

The token seizure, second in New Jersey's history, was made under the New Jersey utility antistrike law which forbids strikes that may create public hardship. In 1947 the State operated the telephones for five weeks.

Douglass Leaves Board to Enter Race in Oklahoma

President Truman yesterday accepted the resignation of Frank P. Douglass as chairman of the National Mediation Board. He quit to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Oklahoma.

The President complimented Douglass for his "splendid service" in a telegram sent to him at McAlester, Okla. He had been a member of the board since 1944.

All-Texas Supper To Be Served Tonight

An all-Texas supper will be served at the Hotel Burlington tonight at 6 for 200 or more Texas Tech alumni gathered to mark Texas Independence Day. Food sent from Lubbock, Tex., will be prepared into a chuck wagon chili supper.

The menu will include chili con carne, frijoles, hot tamales, tortillas, guacamale salad, hot peppers, pickles, pickled onions, pecan pie and coffee, said John R. Cummings, president of newly formed Washington alumni chapter.

75th Division Meeting

The Washington Chapter of the Seventy-fifth Division Association will meet Friday at 8 p. m. in Hotel Shoreham. All former division members are invited.

Polio Victim Gets $10,000 For Accident

A polio victim whose cure was impeded by a fall was awarded $10,000 damages yesterday in District Court. His father was awarded an additional $7500 for expenses.

Winners in the suit were William Kline, 16-year-old invalid, and his father, Bert Kline, of 1812 Burke st. se. The jury imposed the damages upon Capital Transit.

The transit company, under contract with the District, in 1945 regularly brought William from his home to school along with other children. However, on September 24, the transit vehicle's chauffeur, while carrying William, fell from the Kline porch and the lad's left leg was broken.

In addition, muscle transplants were dislodged, and according to a court document it seems unlikely at this time that the two-fold damage from disease and injury can be repaired.

Capital Transit denied any negligence. Kline was represented by Attorney Paul J. Sedgewick. The trial was before Judge Jennings Bailey.

Window Smasher Gets 180 Days Behind Bars

Grover Gotell, 56, of Soldiers Home, Hampton, Va., just didn't care for the beer sign in the window of a cafe at 1200 T st. nw.

That was the reason, he told police, he hurled bricks into the cafe, smashing three windows, on Wednesday. He offered no reason why he tossed a brick through the window of a delicatessen at 1123 S st. nw., a few minutes later.

In Municipal Court yesterday, Gotell was sentenced to serve a total of 180 days straight time on two charges of destroying private property.

'Bicycle Thief' Banned By U. S. Theater Group

New York, March 1 (AP).—The Motion Picture Association of America has banned "The Bicycle Thief" because it shows a little boy urinating in the street and depicts the inside of a bordello.

The ban on the prize-winning Italian film means it cannot appear in MPAA member theaters—about 75 percent of all theaters in the country.

'Petit Chapeau' for Spring

Tiny Hatter Okays Tiny Hats

By Peggy Preston

"UN petit chapeau"—from Paris to San Francisco it's a little hat for spring, 1950.

So says a tiny hatter from the Rue de la Paix, who has just reached Washington after a journey from the French capital to California's Golden Gate. She is Mme. Suzy, famed designer of delightful headgear, whose height can measure only a little more than the list of her distinguished patrons on both sides of the Atlantic.

In spite, or perhaps because of her diminutive stature—she's just under five feet—Mme. Suzy knows how to pack a world of glamour into a wee bonnet. The secret, she revealed yesterday at a private showing of her designs at the French Embassy, is to build a hat around a head, not a face.

"It is all in knowing the bones of the head," she explained as she lifted one colorful bit of feminine frippery after another from her huge hatbox. "In the line of the brow, in the length of the head from temple to base of neck, that is where we judge the design of hat for an individual."

In other words, it matters not whether your face is over or under size, you can do justice to a little hat, provided it is properly constructed.

The "Suzy" theory evidently works. For to her shop in Paris during the past 28 years have come a constant, and faithful, stream of fashion-conscious women. Among them are the Duckess of Kent and the Duchess of Windsor, perennial members of the best-dressed list. Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr., is another of her devotees; and, when in Paris, Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Alan Kirk, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, and scores of other women prominent in Washington circles, make straight for her fascinating, flower-cluttered shop.

Sailors on Top

SUZY'S pronouncements on hat-styles for this year are as follows:

Sailors—of natural artificial straw—take top billing. And they must be worn straight on, not back on the head as formerly. They may be stark little things, or trimmed with flowers and veils. Or, in Suzy's eye, they may resemble a Kepi—as worn by French seamen.

As for colors, it is a mauve year. "Tres chic," says Suzy, fingering a charming lavender straw, trimmed with pale pink roses. Next in order of popularity are white and navy blue.

"The veil should go to the back of the head," she concludes. "It is smarter that way, for we are tired of wearing it over the nose."

There are whimsical touches on the Suzy hats that match her twinkling eyes. An apple, with a tiny blue bird perched on the stem, figures prominently on one flower-laden half-hat. On another, a bright green feather made of silk leaps upright from the top of a small green and white cap.

While in Washington, Mme. Suzy is the house guest of Senora Luciolli, wife of the Counselor of the Italian Embassy.

Korean Honor Awarded to 11 Americans

By Marie McNair
And Elizabeth Maguire

KOREA'S highest decoration, the Order of Taikeuk Third Class, was awarded to 11 Americans and a British subject last evening at a ceremony at the Korean Embassy.

The awards were made by the Ambassador, Dr. John Myun Chang, on the thirty-first anniversary of the Korean rebellion against Japan, when the people, unarmed, arose with the cry "Mansei—A free Korea for 10,000 years."

Those awarded the decorations last evening (some posthumously) had made great contributions to the reestablishment of the Sovereign state which today is the Republic of Korea.

Mrs. Fred Dolph was there last night to receive the medal for her late husband who served as adviser to the Korean Commission following its organization in the United States after the 1919 declaration of independence.

Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University, was awarded the Taikeuk for bringing knowledge of Korea to America. He was for many years president of the Christian Friends of Korea.

The pastor of the Foundry Methodist Church, Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, was decorated for his services as spiritual counselor to the Korean President, Dr. Syngman Rhee, when he lived in Washington. It was from Dr. Harris' study that Dr. Rhee departed for his triumphant return to Korea in October, 1945.

The late Dr. Homer Hulbert, who died and was buried in Korea, was honored for long service there, first as a representative of the State Department, later as adviser to the Korean King. His eldest son, William Hulbert, who was born in Korea, received the decoration.

Mrs. Charles Edward Russell, widow of the noted journalist, received the medal for her husband, and Mrs. Herbert Miller was there to take her husband's decoration for him. Dr. Miller, a stanch friend and supporter of Korea through lectures and the written word, was unable to be present.

Dr. Eli Nowry, a former missionary, was included in the group, and others were Dr. Maurice William, John W. Staggers and Jay Jerome Williams.

'Almost' a Stag Party for Visitor

A DINNER PARTY last evening for 100 top officials and diplomats missed being stag by one lady. Representative Frances P. Bolton of Ohio, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was the one feminine guest at the dinner given by Paul G. Hoffman, ECA Administrator, for Dirk Stikker, Foreign Minister of the Netherlands. The only other woman member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, Helen Gahagan Douglas, is in California.

Mr. Hoffman entertained in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel. Cocktails were served at 7:30 p. m. and dinner followed at 8:30. Spring flowers centered 10 round tables, each seating eight guests, while 18 places were laid at the head table. Many members of the ECA and OEEC were in the distinguished company.

Benelux diplomats attending the dinner included the Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco van Kleffens; the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Robert Silvercruys and the Luxembourg Minister, Hughes Le Gallais. The dean of the corps, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, was a guest, as well as the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Oliver Franks, the Ambassador of Denmark, Henrik de Kauffmann, and the Ambassador of Italy, Alberto Tarchiani.

Others included W. Averell Harriman, United States special representative in Europe for ECA; William C. Foster, deputy administrator of ECA; Richard Bissell, assistant administrator for programs of ECA; C. Tyler Wood, assistant administrator for operations of ECA; Roscoe Drummond, head of information, ECA; and from the OEEC office in Paris, Robert Marjolin and Sir Edmund Hall-Patch.

Among chiefs of mission at the dinner were W. John Kenney, chief of ECA to London; J. D. Zellerbach, chief of ECA to Italy; Robert M. Hanes, chief of ECA to Western Germany, and Paul R. Porter, chief of ECA mission to Greece.

Dr. Stikker, Foreign Minister of The Netherlands, was honor guest at a stag luncheon given yesterday by Assistant Secretary of State George W. Perkins at his house in Georgetown. The Netherlands Ambassador, Eelco van Kleffens, was among the guests.

Mexican Cabinet Minister on Visit

MEXICO'S Minister of Irrigation, Adolfo Orive Alba, has arrived in Washington, accompanied by Senora de Alba, for a two-day stay at the embassy.

Today the Mexican Ambassador, Rafael de la Colina, will be host at a stag luncheon at the embassy in honor of the Cabinet Minister. Senora de Alba will be entertained at a luncheon at the Mayflower by Mrs. Spencer W. Stewart of New York, who is visiting Mrs. Edward H. Conger.

Among guests at the Ambassador's luncheon will be Undersecretary of State James Webb, Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman, Senator Lyndon Johnson, Presidential Assistant John Steelman, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Willard Barber, Assistant Secretary of State Willard Thorn, Presidential Secretary Charles Ross, Walter Saur of the Export-Import Bank, Michael Straus and John D. Fitch.

Senora de la Colina, wife of the Mexican Ambassador and hostess to Senora Orive de Alba during her stay here, will be a guest at Mrs. Stewart's luncheon.

This evening Senor and Senora de Alba will give a dinner at the Shoreham.

Admiral Sherman Honored at Dinner

PRINCE and Princess Christian of Hesse, who are spending the winter at the Mayflower Hotel, were hosts at dinner last evening at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Forrest Sherman, and Mrs. Sherman.

Art Exhibition Opening Today

AN exhibition by two noted artists is opening today at the Watkins Gallery of American University. A reception will be held from 4 to 6 p. m. to view paintings by Sarah Baker and 35 drawings by Marino Marini of Milan, Italy, sculptor of renoun. Both artists will attend the openings.

While in Washington, Mr. Marini will be the guest of the Italian Embassy. A supper party in his honor was given last evening by Mrs. Caresse Crosby, and this evening the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy and Signora Bounous will entertain in his honor.

Soroptimists Fete Leaders

Jap Visitors See 'Cake Of Democracy' in Action

OBSERVING DEMOCRACY first-hand is like finding out how to bake a cake that one has admired in a picture, Miss Tsuneko Akamatsu told the Soroptimist Club yesterday.

In her native Japan, women read and heard democracy as one would read the recipe for a cake; now a group of civic leaders are in America to "see the cake in the making."

Through her interpreter, Miss Akamatsu, a member of the House of Councillors, spoke for the 10 Japanese women who were honored at the Soroptimist Club dinner last night at the Willard Hotel. This group arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon in the first lap of their tour to study democratic processes in America.

Miss Akamatsu told the Soroptimists that Japanese women learned after the war that they could think for themselves. "We must look like children to you who have been thinking for yourselves for so long," she said.

But, she added, that the Japanese women will learn how to "make the cake," and she hoped that one day the Soroptimists could be their guests in Japan.

In the tour with Miss Akamatsu are Miss Fuji Egami, chief of the women's division, Japan Broadcasting Corporation; Miss Shun Goto, vice chief, women's section, Democratic Liberal Party; Mrs. Ai Kume, a practicing attorney and a member of the conciliation committee, Family Court; Miss Michiyo Marusawa, member of the central executive committee, National Railway Workers Union; Mrs. Katsuko Nomura, member of the central committee, Japan Consumers' Cooperative Union League; Mrs. Matsuyo Omori Yamamoto, chief, Home Demonstration Section, Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry; Mrs. Setsuko Tanino, chief, Women in Industry section, Women's and Minors' Bureau of the Labor Ministry and Japan's first woman labor inspector; Mrs. Satoko Togano, member of the central committee, Social Democrat party and a member of the board of directors, Japan UNESCO Cooperative Association; and Mrs. Nobuko Tomita, publications editor, women's section, Women's and Minors' bureau.

Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, brought greetings to the Japanese visitors. She said she hoped the civic leaders "would ask questions on how the women in the United States are organized, or I might add, are over-organized." She spoke briefly of her visit to Tokyo over a year ago.

Miss Mary V. Judge, president of the Washington Soroptimists, presided at the evening meeting. Barrington Sharma, bass baritone, was guest soloist.

AAUW Backs Barden Bill

A call for action in support of Federal aid to education, as set forth in the Barden bill now before the House Labor and Education Committee, has been sent out from national headquarters of the American Association of University Women to State divisions.

A letter to state education and legislative chairmen points out that the Barden bill is the first Federal aid to education bill to which the Association could give full indorsement, though the AAUW legislative program has carried an item favoring the principle of Federal aid to education since 1937. The stand of AAUW is in support of "Federal aid, under conditions safeguarding state control, to equalize, extend, and improve public education for children, youth, and adults."

The AAUW has not given full support to the Taft Bill, passed by the Senate, because it provides that the States may use the Federal funds in the same way that they use State funds. This would permit in at least sixteen States the use of Federal funds for other than public schools for certain services.

The AAUW Journal points out that the Barden Bill deviates from the Taft Bill in four significant respects.

'Suburban Living Styles to Be Shown

"SUBURBAN LIVING" is the title of the fashion show that will be a feature of the luncheon given by the Women's Council of the Montgomery County Jewish Community Friday at 12:30 p. m. The event will take place at Brook Farm, Chevy Chase, with fashions presented by Claire Dratch.

Proceeds will go toward furnishing the new M. C. J. C. Center Building. For reservations call Mrs. Morton Kramer. Co-chairmen of the affair are Mrs. Maynard Cohen and Mrs. William Starr.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Father of Girl in College Intercepts Letter Which Indicates She's Having an Affair With Inferior Young Man; To Whom Should Dad Speak?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the father of a daughter who is now just past 20 years of age. She has been brought up in very nice surroundings and is a college student at present.

For the past few months June has been going out with a certain young man who is plainly not her equal on the score of education and social standing; but we (her parents) have never expressed or indicated disapproval in any manner, because we never have had any occasion to discuss the matter with her.

Recently I intercepted a letter which speaks for itself and gives definite indication that these two young people have started an affair. I have not yet divulged this knowledge to anybody. I haven't even told my wife, because I wish to spare her hurt, if possible.

Says the Fellow's Unready to Marry

FOR THE PAST few months I noticed that June was uncomfortable or uneasy in our company, and seemed anxious to avoid even the company of her friends, with the exception of this man. Brady (I'll call him) is attending some sort of trade school, but is not in a position to start married life for some time yet, even if he were willing to get married.

I just can't figure the best way to approach the problem, and I am fearful of making an error. Should I disclose my anxieties to my wife? Should I let my daughter know that I am aware of the affair? I shall be very grateful for advice or suggestions from you.

E. J.

Good Communication Benefits Character

DEAR E. J.: A father has failed remarkably in one of his major protective duties as a parent, namely, the obligation to develop good communication with his offspring, if after 20 years of being a father, he feels obliged to resort to hidden spying and prying, of the sort that is implicit in intercepting mail, in order to gain knowledge of his daughter's problems or the nature of her social affiliations.

Old time novels pictured the heroes as "strong silent men,"—faithful to the school of thought that tightlipped self containment about disturbing matters was synonymous with ability to get the best of any difficulty. Growth of understanding of human nature and human needs has dissolved that notion. People need above all to trust each other, confident of reciprocal interest and mutual good will that won't take advantage of self revelations about anxieties, objectives, aspirations, etc.

It seems obvious from your letter that good communication, the understructure of continuing good personal relations, isn't practised in your household—neither between husband and wife nor between parents and child. Notice you haven't discussed your concern about June with your wife (the appropriate confidante on two counts); nor have you or the mother spoken to June about your "felt" disapproval of Brady, as normally expressive, comfortably devoted parents would do in like circumstances.

Girl Is Refugee From Loneliness

AND I SURMISE that this lonely atmosphere of home, where it seems all live incommunicado, as if without personal feelings and without care for what goes on in the other's heart—I think this comfortless atmosphere has much to do with June's drifting into an affair with a crude young man who isn't abashed by her ingrained reserve, moral scruples, sensitivity, etc., all of which are signified by her distrait manner since starting the liaison.

Back of June's mistake is a great hunger for direct sympathetic communion with another personality, an experience never realized with her parents. And the deep corrective is to give her perspective on her problem, and emotional support in bypassing Brady, in better-informed search of a real affinity. How to do that? Have your pastor or family doctor refer you to a first-rate counselor in family relations, or a good psychologist; state the case to the specialist, and get step-by-step guidance on how to speak and act effectively on June's behalf.

M. H.

Eyes of Texas Are Upon Old Grads Tonight

Former students of the University of Texas will see what college life was like in 1900, 1920, and what it's like now when they hold their traditional banquet this evening at Hotel 2400.

Skits, in which many Texas Congressmen who once attended the university will participate along with other former students will be presented to show the five decader of twentieth century life at the university.

President of the former students here is former Representative Fritz Lanham who has stated that this will be a banquet with "no speeches. It's going to be all entertainment."

The fete will start promptly at 7:30 p. m. and tne 300 Texas alumni now living in the District (which include Senator Tom Connally and Justice Tom Clark) are asked to bring their friends and guests since the party will not be limited to former students.

Your Figure, Madame

Even Your Best Friend Won't Tell You That You Really Should Reduce

By Ida Jean Kain

DON'T let anything weaken your belief in yourself. You will be able to get your weight to normal and have a nicer figure than you ever had.

But no use blinking, your friends will be no help at first. So the less you talk about it, the better. Through mistaken loyalty, friends always feel obliged to assure you that you are not too heavy, that you carry the weight well . . . and they invariably wind up with the warning that reducing is aging!

This is the worst thing friends could do. Naturally such remarks throw doubt and fear into your mind, and you begin to wonder if all this is necessary. Doubt acts like a wet blanket, lessens energy and checks your impulse to continued action.

Talk It Over With Your Doctor

THE best plan is to talk it over only with a doctor. The medical profession is no longer tolerant of fat, for normal weight is important to health. The doctor will not regard your desire to reduce as mere feminine whim—if you are toting excess fat. So if he has advised that reducing will improve your health and lengthen your life, let no doubt come into your mind.

If you have tried dieting many times but slipped back into old fattening habits, your mind may be skeptical of this new determination. Practice being firm with that mind of yours . . . make it believe. It is so important to know that if your desire and belief are strong enough, anything is possible. By believing, you tune in to a powerful universal law. Continue to hold in mind the picture of how you can look and feel . . . that will help prevent fear and doubt from creeping in.

There is a technique that helps convince your mind. Before going to sleep at night, tell yourself something like this: "I'm doing fine. I know I can get down to healthy, normal weight and look and feel younger." Make it a prayer—you don't have to do it all alone.

Oh, What a Beautiful Morning to Diet

YOUR first thought in the morning will be: It's a good day for slimming! Your impulse will be to stretch . . . stretch with a purpose.

The subconscious mind is the deep seat of habit and is the part of the mind that obeys instructions. During sleep the subconscious mind takes over, so just before dozing off give last-minute instructions. This can strengthen the desire to make yourself over.

And get enough sleep—it bolsters will power. Eight hours most of the time is the rule. Without sufficient sleep, energy lowers and you slip back into old fattening habits, willy-nilly.

With this new will-to-do, you'll make progress—surprising progress. Then when your friends catch on, they can only say, "Good for you! I wish I had your will power." And what a boost that will be to your morale!

Choose South Pacific Theme for Navy Ball

South Pacific will hold sway with Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey, the guest of honor for the Navy Relief Ball April 14 in the Sail Loft.

Following Navy ball precedent, funds raised will go to the support of the District of Columbia Auxiliary of the Navy Relief Society. The society is a hard-working welfare organization serving 500,000 Navy and Marine Corps personnel financially and in many other ways in time of need.

It has a wide variety of activities such as locating houses, establishing homes, assisting in transportation emergencies, in handling many instances of illness and incapacity, and caring for children in special need.

Rear Admiral Glenn B. Davis is president of the auxiliary, which is carried on by a group of volunteer workers and a small professional staff.

Names of the executive committee for the ball, of which Mrs. Forrest P. Sherman is honorary chairman, have been announced by Mrs. Frank G. Fahrion, the executive chairman. They include Mrs. Ray A. Robinson, vice chairman; Mrs. Howard Orem, treasurer; Mrs. Charles G. DeKay, secretary.

Only the Beginning of the Contest And Reader's Stuck Already, But Anne Solves This Sewing Problem

DEAR ANNE,

I hope it isn't against the rules of The Post sewing contest to ask your advice, because here it is, only the first day of the competition and I'm stuck already. I'm hoping to enter a dress in the tailored division, having inherited a length of beautiful green and white tissue tweed from my sister, who bought it, then changed her mind. My problem is a belt, I haven't been able to find just the right shade leather and so decided to make one of the material. But how to get that professional tailored look bothers me. Shall I cover buckram, or stitch through several layers of the material, or what? And can you tell me where in Washington I can get a buckle covered to match?

Mrs. R. J. S.

If that's your only problem, you're practically a winner already, Mrs. S. For about 75 cents, in the notions department of most department stores, you can buy a belt-making kit, complete with buckle and directions for covering, that will solve your belt problems, now and in your future sewing. With this kit, all you have to do is 'cut, fold and press' to get a neat tailored belt in a jiffy. However, if you'd rather have the buckle made, most department stores provide this service also.

DEAR ANNE:

With Passover not so far away (April 2 to 9), I thought you might appreciate a recipe I have used for many years to "spice" up the menu. Matzo Kugel is especially good when you're entaining a mixed group, as men go for that. Nowadays, you don't have to stop entertaining during the Passover holidays because you just don't know what to serve.

MRS. REBECCA SALUS,
4611 15th st. nw.

Mrs. Salus's recipe for Matzo Kugel:

3 matzos, 2 tablespoons fat, 1 cup matzo meal, ¼ cup chopped almonds, ½ lemon grated rind only, 1 large apple grated, 5 eggs, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ pound (½ cup) hot fat.

Soak matzos in water. When soft, press out excess water. Heat fat in spider and matzos to dry them further. Stir in matzo meal. Then add beaten egg yolks, almonds, lemon rind, salt, and grated apple. Lastly add stiffly beaten egg whites. Put in a greased pudding dish and pour hot fat over it. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 40 minutes until brown. Serve with wine.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you tell me how I could frost the glass in one of our front windows? I want to do the job myself if possible.

MRS. G. S. H.,
Alexandria.

First, clean the glass until it sparkles with alcohol or dry cleaning fluid. Next, cut a thin sheet of white tissue paper to fit exactly. Cover window with this and apply spar varnish thinned with one-fourth as much turpentine. This will stick the paper to the glass and render it waterproof. Another simple method is to pat the glass with a lump of putty softened with a little linseed oil. Repeat after 24 hours of drying.

To K. G. W. of Parkfairfax, who was in search of a tailoring class: I have been advised that a sewing center on Wilson blvd. (telephone Oxford 3636) is conducting a school in foundation dressmaking and tailoring.

DEAR ANNE:

Will you please publish directions for cooking the large African lobster tails available now at fish markets?

M.J.S.

DEAR M.J.S.:

These lobster tails—imported frozen from Africa, as well as Australia, Cuba, Mexico, and the Bahamas—come from spiny rock lobsters which do not have claws.

In serving, allow one tail (½ to ¾ pound) to a person. You can boil or broil them. To boil, immerse tails in boiling water seasoned to your taste. Boil in covered pot 15 to 17 minutes. Split and serve with melted butter or margarine.

To broil tails, split down the underside and place in preheated oven about 4 inches from flame. Cook 15 minutes, or until well browned, basting at intervals with melted butter.

One on the Aisle—

Good Photography Wasted on 'Foxes'

By Richard L. Coe

"PRINCE OF FOXES," at the Palace, is good to look at, horrible to listen to and hard to take.

Adapted from a popular novel by Samuel Shellabarger, it was filmed under American auspices in Italy before true-life settings of the Renaissance. These are most impressive and their age seems to seep through the carefully-staged photographs.

The screen play by Milton Krims is on the level of comic strip balloons, and the story, however, intriguing it may have been in Shellabarger's original, is never more than skeletonized happenings to pasteboard people.

This low-level posing, posturing and limp dialogue make the picture hard to take and, with the exception of Tyrone Power's rather natural fit for the heroic leading role, the acting is stiffly unnatural. Wanda Hendrix, as the heroine, turns in a totally inept and unconvincing performance.

The story concerns a dark, handsome adventurer who works his way up in the scheming world of Borgias. Cesare hopes to arrange a marriage between his sister Lucrezia and the Duke of Ferrara, part of his plot to form a strategic city-state. Next on the hero's agenda is an aged duke's stronghold, Citta del Monte, which Cesare Borgia hopes to capture by gulle.

Goodness in the hero's soul comes to the fore and he does what he can to help the aged duke, whose youthful wife inspires True Love in hero. Cesare is livid, captures heroic Orsini, gouges out his eyes. It's now revealed that the young married woman loves Orsini back, is willing to overlook his lowly birth (he'd been posing as an aristocrat). On her aged husband's death, we learn that he had only married his young ward to protect her, that she is delicately intact and that Love will bestow its material rewards on the young, shiny-toothed couple.

No one does much more than walk through this trite panegyric to True Love and the scenes are stagy in the extreme. Orson Welles grimaces as the wicked Borgia, Everett Sloane makes a pallid show of gouging Power's eyes out and Miss Hendrix' complete inappropriateness for her role is virtually staggering.

The scenes of Venice, nicely preserved, of Sienna and San Marino (representing Citta del Monte) are lovely, but it is rather depressing to think that the makers of this picture must be baffled by such criticism as this. Writer Krims, Director Henry King and Producer Sol C. Siegel probably thought they had conquered all by simply taking good photographs around a trite script. Undeniably, they had something in their idea of filming a renaissance story in the proper setting, but a good movie also demands good writing.

ITALY also is the setting for the Mount Vernon Players' new production, which opens a two-week run tonight in their undercroft playhouse at 900 Massachusetts ave., at 8:30 . . . This is Luigi Pirandello's "Henry IV," a comedy about a contemporary aristocrat who imagines himself to be the German King Henry of the eleventh century . . . Orville French has this rich part and others in the cast include Joan Coppock, Bert Bram, Robert Hogan, Herbert Harvey, Doris French, Roderick Boes, James Strother, Donald Reeder, Richard Davis and Leon Norris.

"PRINCE OF FOXES." 20th Century release produced by Sol C. Siegel in Italy. Screen play by Milton Krims from the novel by Samuel Shellabarger. Music by Alfred Newman. Photographed by Leon Shamroy and Fred Sersen. Directed by Henry King. At the Palace.

FAMOUS SCENE COMING SOON: Judy Holiday, who scored a hit that raised her to stardom in "Born Yesterday," will appear in that comedy starting March 20 on the Gayety stage. A similar hit as the murderous wife in the Hepburn-Tracy comedy, "Adam's Rib" propelled Miss Holiday into the screen version of "Born Yesterday," which will be filmed after her appearance here. With her in this scene is Paul Douglas, who will not be in the Gayety cast, being fruitfully occupied in Hollywood himself.

Strand Gets O. K. of District; 'Legitimate' Lease Due Soon

By Richard L. Coe
Post Reporter

The District Building Inspectors' office yesterday found the Strand Theater "structurally safe and sound," thus, according to an American National Theater and Academy official, "removing all obstacles" to ANTA's lease for the building.

Signing of the lease will take place "at the earliest convenience" of the owner, 89-year-old Marcus Notes, who has been confined to his Baltimore home with a severe cold for the past three weeks.

One more cheering item for parched theatergoers of the Capital developed yesterday with the announcement in New York that Harold Bromley and Eunice Healey have been assured of a ten-week trial management of the Gayety Theater, which will return the city to the legitimate fold next Monday night with a two-week engagement of Susan Peters in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Bromley and Miss Healey announced that Judy Holiday would resume her starring role in "Born Yesterday" to open at the Gayety March 20. They are now lining up available road plays to succeed Miss Holiday's engagement, after which the young actress, who scored in Hollywood's "Adam's Rib," will recreate the "Born Yesterday" role in pictures.

Another report along Washington theater row—that the National might return to the legitimate fold—was scotched by the revelation that Marcus Heiman, operator of the National, only a few days ago turned down an offer by ANTA to lease his theater. On his return from Europe last week, Gilbert Miller offered to take over the E street house, closed since August, 1948 because of the segregation dispute, but once more Heiman refused.

The money needed to restore the Strand will come from ANTA and members of the Committee of Theatrical Producers of New York.

Postlude

Strings Feature National Symphony Recital

By Paul Hume

There was nothing light about last night's concert of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Claudio Arrau was soloist in the B Flat piano concerto of Brahms, the symphony was Beethoven's fifth. The opening music was Vaughan Williams' Fantasy on a Theme by Tudor England's Thomas Tallis.

The Tallis theme is noble, and Vaughan Williams has enhanced it by his rich treatment. His fantasy is scored for two separate string orchestras of unequal size plus solo string quartet. The entire string body of the National Symphony covered Constitution Hall's stage. They have never sounded more beautiful or more enthralling. It is a great work we should hear next season without fail.

In Brahms' tremendous concerto, Claudio Arrau drew from his superb piano some of the finest massive tone we have heard. His reading of the music was never forced, yet he triumphed over its prodigious problems.

It was a thoroughly personal account of the music. Phrase after phrase from both soloist and orchestra was shaped rhythmically to fit its obvious contours. Tempos were broadened at will, and in similar fashion increased to balance the whole. Yet one never felt the liberties were out of place.

Arrau was particularly free in his concept of solo lines in the work. His tone sang above the ponderous orchestration at all times, and his rhythmic playing punctuated the concerto with fine effect. A broad ritard, not marked in the score made the last page sepecially effective.

As for the Beethovan Fifth, it formed a fitting climax to Mitchell's last Wednesday night concert of the season. He loves the music and plays it with devoted fire. The orchestra sounded its best in every section. There was minor trouble in the cellos' intonation in the third movement, but it did not mar the work seriously.

We will review Mitchell's entire season early in April. His closing Wednesday night program set a fine standard. Next week: Mitropoulas in Mozart and Mahler.

American's Flights Reduced by Strike

American Airlines yesterday sharply curtailed flight service throughout the Nation, including Washington, because of a strike of maintenance workers.

Seventy-five members of the CIO Transport Workers Union reported for work here at 7 a. m. yesterday, but walked out a half hour later, joining strikers across the country.

Up to 3 p. m., American maintained usual schedules. After that all coach and freighter flights were canceled. The cancellations included 60 percent of the four-engine passenger flights and 80 percent of the two-engine passenger trips, the line said.

Throughout the day maintenance and stores workers of American picketed at the National Airport.

Eastern Airlines announced it would schedule seven extra flights each way between New York and Washington to take up part of the curtailment.

If the strike stretches, it may involve pilots, too, a Washington spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association said last night. "We will fly the planes as long as they are safe, but we can't fly for very long without maintenance," he stated.

In New York last night, National Mediation Board officials said American Airlines and the union were "not far apart."

The union has asked for a 20-cent hourly wage increase, a job security clause and other benefits.

Gallinger Aide Named to U.S. Research Post

Dr. Lewis K. Sweet, chief medical officer in pediatrics at Gallinger Hospital, will resign July 2 to take a Federal medical research post.

He will become director of clinical research at the Institute of Microbiology, National Institutes of Health, at Bethesda, Md., at a considerable salary increase.

Dr. Sweet's Gallinger salary ceiling is set by law at $7911 a year. In his new job with the research arm of Public Health Service, Dr. Sweet will get $10,000 a year it was reported.

Dr. Sweet has held the Gallinger position since 1938. He graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1929.

The hospital's rapid drop in infant mortality rates during the past several years is ascribed largely to Dr. Sweet's efforts.

Denham Plans Test Case on NLRB Powers

By the United Press

General Counsel Robert N. Denham of the National Labor Relations Board struck back at board members yesterday for curtailing his powers and promised a test case to see who is boss.

In announcing his "refusal to submit" to the board order, Denham accused its members of trying to "usurp" his authority. He said he had administered the Taft-Hartley Act for 2½ years without any criticism "from my boss"—President Truman.

Denham was aroused by a board order, issued last Thursday, curtailing his hiring and firing authority and laying down new rules for enforcement of board decisions. It made Denham's personal appointments subject to approval of the board.

The flare-up is the latest between the board and Denham over interpretation of the Taft-Hartley law. Last January Denham accused the board of being pro-labor and urged management to appeal board decisions to the courts.

Denham said the "test case" would come when he appointed a new director of the NLRB Memphis office. He said he would not consult the board and "I don't know what will happen."

Denham accused the five-man board of trying to exercise authority it "does not possess" by trying to control personnel in his regional offices.

He said that when he was appointed, President Truman instructed him to "administer the law the way it is written."

Chairman Paul M. Herzog and other board members had no comment on the general counsel's blast.

D. R. Glass Retires; 18 Years With VA

David R. Glass, 70-year-old Veterans' Administration employe who claims to have been the first president of the American Federation of Government Employes, retired yesterday after more than 18 years of service.

In 1932, Glass resigned from the VA to organize the union, but rejoined it in 1945 as a file clerk in the records service. He now has a District Court suit pending against the union for $3500 in back salary allegedly due as adviser to the organization.

Three other VA workers who retired were Mrs. Mabel W. Madden of 112 S st. nw., docket clerk, 42 years service; Miss Lillian P. Murphy, 3505 McKinley st. nw., mail clerk, 32 years service, and Mrs. Ida B. Smith, 4251 Walsh st., Chevy Chase, Md., clerk, 32 years service.

John Cairns Retires At Medical Center

John K. Cairns, 22 Madison ave. nw., was retired at the Army Medical Center, receiving a letter of commendation. A central boiler room engineer, Cairns joined the boiler room as a fireman on January 10, 1921.

Retiring Salesman Talks On Business Changes

John A. McClain, 62, of 7120 Moorland la., Bethesda, can remember when the meat business consisted of driving a steer up to a tree, shooting it, hooking it to a block and tackle, dressing and cutting it and then peddling it over the countryside from the back of a horse and wagon.

McClain

In the 37 years since he went to work for Swift & Co. in Richmond, Va., he has seen the business develop into a highly skilled program employing increasingly efficient methods of refrigeration and packaging.

Born and raised at Frederick, Md., McClain learned butchering from his father. After starting with Swift at Richmond, he worked in Norfolk, then Washington. For three years he went out on his own, buying cattle near Frederick and selling it in Baltimore, but after a while "a weekly pay check looked better" and he returned to Swift.

Yesterday "Mac," as he is best known, retired after heading the sale of Swift's smoked meats in this area for the past 30 years. This summer he will head for California and after that I'm afraid I will have too much time on my hands," he said.

His coworkers gave him a calfskin two-suiter piece of luggage as a going-away present.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

Facing Death, Jesus Ignored Expediency for the Sake of Right

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Peter Marshall

THE PARADOX OF SALVATION

"He saved others; himself He cannot save."

MATTHEW 27:42.

Aye, they could admit it now. They could grant Him triumphs of yesterday for, now today, the triumph was theirs!
It was strangely dark.
A thunderstorm was blowing up from the mountains and the clouds hid the sun.
Women took children by the hand and hurried back to the city.
People looked up at the sky and became frightened.
It was an uncanny darkness.
They stood blinking at flashes of lightning like daggers of fire.
There were eyes watching this Man on the Cross . . .
shifting doubting eyes eyes through which Hell itself was looking eyes with gloating in them other eyes that looked and never saw.

* * * *

Lips were moving . . . fierce fastened lips drawn in thin lines of cruelty . . . open lips that vomited blasphemy like craters of hate.
Faces were looking up at him . . . white faces mad faces, twisted and distorted laughing faces . . . convulsed faces . . .
faces jeering and roaring round the foot of the Cross.
Fingers pointed up to Him hanging quivering on the tree . . . long bony fingers . . .
mocking, accusing fingers—fingers of scorn and ridicule.
There was noise . . . confused noise that beat in His ears.
There was demoniac laughter that enjoyed suffering, hoarse shouting that taunted and mocked.
From one side of Him there were sighs of pain and the soft moans of a dying thief, and on the other side blasphemies and curses terrible to hear.

* * * *

There was weeping too, the crying of women and the unashamed sobbing of men.
The wounded flower of Magdala was consoled by that lovely one who once held Him in her arms, while the beloved John stood beside them
Simon of Cyrene from time to time wiped away his tears with the back of his hand.
Peter stood on the fringe of the crowd blinded by hot tears that filled his eyes, while his very heart broke.
They hurled His own words back at Him, but they were barbs, dipped in venom and shot from snarling lips, like poisoned arrows.

"He saved others, Himself He cannot save.
Yes, He healed the cripples.
Yes, He gave sight to the blind.
He made withered arms whole again.
He even brought back the dead, but He cannot save Himself."

"Perform a miracle now, Miracle Man! Come down from the Cross, and we will believe you.
Aha, Thou who wouldst build the temple in three days.
Thou hast nails in Thy hands . . .
Thou hast wood . . . go on and build Thy temple."
"If thou be the Christ . . . come on down from the Cross!"
They shouted until they were hoarse.
The noise was so great that only a few of them standing near the Cross heard what He said when His lips moved in prayer:

"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

* * * *

One of the thieves, drugged and half drunk, cried out to Jesus:

"Can't You see how we suffer?
If you are the Son of God, take us down from these crosses.
Save us and Yourself."

Then a spasm of pain gripped him, and He began to curse and to swear, blaming Jesus for the pain.
But the other turned his head, so that he could see Jesus, and he said to his companion:

"Dost thou not fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation, and we indeed justly, for we have broken their laws . . . but this man hath done nothing amiss."

Then he said to Jesus: "Remember me when Thou comest into Thy Kingdom."

And Jesus, His face drawn with pain, but His voice still kind, answered:

"This very day when this pain is over, we shall be together . . . you and I . . . in Paradise."

And the man, comforted, set his lips to endure to the end.
The sun rose higher and higher. Time oozed out like the blood that dripped from the Cross . . .
Jesus opened His eyes and saw His mother standing there, and John beside her.
He called out the name of John, who came closer, and Jesus said:

"You will take care of her, John?" . . .

and John, choked with tears, put his arm around the shoulder of Mary.
Jesus said to His mother: "He will be your son."
His lips were parched, and He spoke with difficulty.
He moved His head uneasily against the hard wood of the Cross, as a sick man moves his head on a hot pillow.
The woman beneath the Cross stood praying for Jesus and for the thieves.
The centurion was silent, although every now and then he would look up at Jesus with a strange look on his face.
The soldiers were silent, too. Their gambling was done.
They had won . . . and lost.
Suddenly Jesus opened His eyes and gave a loud cry.
The gladness in His voice startled all who heard it, for it sounded like a shout of victory:

"It is finished. Father, into Thy hands I commit My spirit."

And with that cry He died.
Yes, "He saved others: Himself He cannot save"!
But they were wrong, as well as right.
Could He not have saved Himself?
He might have compromised with the priests—made a bargain with Caiaphas, talked things over with Pilate.
He might have made His kingdom political instead of spiritual.
He might have chosen the expedient rather than the right.
As He Himself reminded Peter, He might have called upon twelve legions of angels to rescue Him and to show His great power.
He might have withstood the plottings and devices of wicked men.
Yes, He might have saved Himself. He had the power; but then He would never have been our Saviour!
For no man can save himself who saves another.
The acorn cannot save itself, if it is to bud a tree.
The soldier cannot save himself, if he is to save his country.
Nor can the Shepherd save Himself, if He would save His sheep.
Christ is the Good Shepherd, and hence, when He would consummate the great salvation, there was no other way to save us than to lay down
His life for our salvation.
For to love is never to think of one's self, but to give one's self for the one loved.
And He loved us and gave Himself for us.

Peter Marshall Talks Printed In New Series

"The Exile Heart" is a double memorial to the late Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, former pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and Senate chaplain.

The collection of 10 of the Scottish sermons and talks by the Presbyterian clergyman was compiled as a tribute to him by a group of his friends from New York Avenue Church after his death in January, 1949.

Funds raised from its sale will be used for a memorial to the former pastor in the new church which is to be erected at 13th st. and New York ave. nw.

Scottish organizations from the United States and from foreign countries, in addition to Great Britain, have already ordered more than 3000 copies of the book.

The talks were given by the Scottish-born pastor between 1933 and 1945 at meetings of various groups and from his church pulpit.

Mrs. Catherine Marshall, the pastor's widow, who also prepared a volume of her husband's sermons entitled "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master" now running in The Washington Post, was a consulting editor for the book.

Also included in the book are tributes from the men who knew Dr. Marshall—Senators Wherry, Vandenberg, and Lucas and Vice President Alben Barkley, Sir John Balfour, British Ambassador to the Argentine, and the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

"The Exile Heart" may be obtained at the Church Book Shop in the Woodward Building, from the Peter Marshall Scottish Memorial Committee, 1406 New York ave. nw., or at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

The DISTRICT LINE. by Bill Gold

They'll Pass a Buck But Seldom Spend One

Mrs. Kathryn R. Thomas of 3818 Hayes st. ne. sent a letter to Capital Transit a few weeks ago, reporting a dangerous condition.

The outbound bus stop at Kenilworth ave. and Hayes st. ne. was in very muddy condition, and a small girl who was boarding a bus there slipped in the goo, and almost went under the wheels.

Capital Transit replied that an investigation revealed that the area was indeed very muddy. "However, this is the responsibility of the District Highway Department, and we suggest that you refer your report to them."

Dutifully, Mrs. Thomas wrote out a report for the District Highway Department, and a few weeks later was rewarded with a reply which said:

"The proper solution or this condition is considered to be the improvement of the bus stop by the Capital Transit Company, and a copy of your letter has been forwarded to that company for consideration."

Now if Capital Transit will make five copies of that letter and send them off within 24 hours to five friends, the name at the top of the list will probably be that of the dry cleaner who got the mud out of the little girl's coat.

OVERHEARD

The lieutenant commander sipped his beer and looked at his wrist watch for the umpteenth time. Obviously, he was waiting for somebody.

At long last a bright young two-striper breezed in, hung up his cap, and pulled up a chair.

"Well," the lieutenant commander greeted him, "what's the news?"

"Big news," replied the newcomer. "I'm transferred to sea duty."

"You don't say," murmured the older man. "I didn't know we still had anything afloat."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

An editorial in your February 26 issue views with alarm the "modified murder" in professional boxing, and deplores the "specious glamour" with which the business has become vested. I wholeheartedly agree with these sentiments.

But it is an unfortunate fact that newspaper comic pages are more widely read than editorial pages, and if the Joe Palooka strip doesn't serve to glamorize the fight game, I'll eat a ton of type.

Newton B. Jaslow,
611 H st. ne.

Dear Newt:

Every time there's a fatal accident in the ring, it gets widespread publicity. But have you ever kept track of the football fatalities? The number of boys killed riding bicycles? Or the number of hunting accidents? The statistics might surprise you.

Back in 1933 I was on the sports desk of the Springfield (O.) News. Our sports editor was Jack Reid, who was pushing 80 at the time and will probably outlive both of us. Jack thought that only three sports were worth space in the paper: baseball, harness racing and boxing, in that order.

He was infuriated by the suggestion that boxing was, per se, a brutal or dangerous sport. To gather ammunition for use in arguments with boxing's enemies, Jack would each year compile a list of all the boxers and football players killed "in action." The football list used to run at least 10 times as long as the boxing list.

As for the Palooka strip, it's probably read by more grownups than youngsters. And if the youngsters are impressionable, console yourself that they get a lot more from Joe Palooka than the urge to become prize fighters.

They also learn sportsmanship, tolerance, and good citizenship—a pretty useful triumvirate for any kid.

I'm a hard guy to convince that boxing is bad for a fellow, because I used to do a spot of leather pushing myself 40 pounds ago, and aside from a few scrambled brains that qualify me as a columnist, I don't think I suffered any ill effects.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., wonders whether Idaho motorists driving through other States are embarrassed these days by that potato on their license plates.

YOUNGER GENERATION

Being an old sidekick of mine from Cincinnati, Milton J. Steinman of 2609 Monroe st. ne. thinks I'm old enough to appreciate a bit of dialogue he overheard on a streetcar recently.

It was Saturday, and the two 12-year-old boys were abviously on their way to the movies. After a few minutes of concentration on The Washington Post's movie page, one lad suggested:

"How about this double feature of two W. C. Fields pictures? That ought to be good."

"W. C. Fields?" echoed the other boy. "Who is W. C. Fields?"

"Well, I'm not sure," replied the first, "but my father says he was an old-time comedian, like Milton Berle."

GOOD SPOT FOR PUN

Now that the Oklahoma leopard has been eliminated as a threat to his two-legged neighbors, Kurt Rosenwald of 2230 Savannah ter. se. asks:

"Why were they trying to spot the leopard from an airplane? Wasn't he already spotted?"

He certainly was. That leopard was the best spot news story of the week.

Two Indicted In Tax Case After Story

By Drew Pearson

Last June, after a huddle of lawyers in Birmingham, Ala., an important income-tax fraud case was sent back to the Justice Department in Washington, where it was marked "Closed." "No prosecution."

Pearson

The case involved Joe Mitchell and Sam Ripps of Mobile, who were alleged to have profited from the sale of jewelry to Army post exchanges during the war and then cheated the Government out of income taxes.

But the lawyers' huddle in Birmingham decided that there was no case against Mitchell and Ripps, and sent it back for "No prosecution."

Six months later, however, on December 16, 1949, this column published the whole story of the Ripps-Mitchell scandal, including the fact that they were defended in Birmingham by Ben Leader, former law partner of U. S. Attorney John Hill, the man who was supposed to prosecute them.

Just a few days before this story was published, John Hill telephoned the Justice Department from Birmingham, warning that "Pearson had one of his investigators in Birmingham probing the Ripps-Mitchell case." Three days later, when the story was published, Hill issued a general denial.

However, the Justice Department, with some of the new facts disclosed by this column, reopened the Ripps-Mitchell case. And last week, in Mobile, the two men were indicted.

Unemployment Picture

The Council of Economic Advisers has just presented a significant, secret, three-page analysis of the country's economic problems to the President. Here in brief is what Truman's advisers told him:

1. The major problem facing the country today is the sharp rise in unemployment:

(a) During the month of January, unemployment set a record postwar high with 4,500,000 out of work—almost one million higher than the previous month. Unemployment is now at 7 percent of the total labor force, as against only a little over 4 percent one year ago.

(b) The increase of one million in the ranks of the unemployed in a 30-day period is considerably more than would normally occur at this time of year.

2. Partly offsetting the poor unemployment picture is the high level of home construction, business loans and bank clearings. In addition, those people who are still employed have not received any appreciable pay cuts.

3. In general, the present situation, while warranting the closest study, is not as yet alarming.

4. The basic problem is one of expanding the United States economy fast enough to absorb the ever-increasing number of people available for work. During the year 1949, for example, the labor force increased by 1,300,000. Today's high level of unemployment is due to the failure of the economy to grow sufficiently during 1949.

5. The present economic situation calls for action along three major lines:

(a) The development of a program to stimulate business investment, planning for large public-works expenditures and increased attention to local areas of severe unemployment.

(b) Continued Government spending in order to pour money into the economic stream (defense spending, Social Security, unemployment compensation, veterans' benefits, etc.).

(c) The rapid settlement of the coal strike before coal shortages send a chain reaction of unemployment throughout the Nation.

Note 1—Few economists in Washington go along with the President's advisers on Point 3, wherein they minimize the economic danger signals. Other economic experts consider the sharp and unexpected increase in jobless to be a serious economic storm signal.

Note 2—One of the most tragic aspects of the unemployment picture is that men of 40 and over, with growing families, have been hardest hit.

Rankin Silenced

John Rankin, the wild-talking Mississippi Congressman, met his match on the House floor last week. It happened early in the morning of the long Dixiecrat filibuster against FEPC.

The speaker was Representative Andy Jacobs. Eying Rankin, he continued: "I'm getting weary of the member getting up and imputing chicanery to those who disagree with him."

Rankin subsided, remained quiet for at least 15 minutes—a record for him.

Gabrielson's Good Job

There is good reason why Guy Gabrielson, the friendly GOP national chairman, is sitting back pleased as punch despite the hullaballoo over the Republican policy statement.

In little over six months, the New Jersey industrialist has accomplished the impossible. He has not only pulled the limping GOP out of debt, but has put more than $200,000 in its coffers.

President Chooses Governor Knous For Federal Bench

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday nominated Gov. W. Lee Knous of Colorado, a former prize fighter and practicing attorney, to be a Federal district judge for Colorado.

Knous, 61, will resign the Colorado governorship to succeed John Foster Symes, who plans to retire. Knous has been governor since 1946.

His nomination was supported by Sen. Edwin Johnson (D., Colo.), who recently saw Mr. Truman on the matter. The President was reported to have been undecided between Knous and Attorney General John W. Metzger.

A native of Ouray, Colo., Knous was a prize fighter in his youth and later refereed one of the bouts of former heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey.

He began his political career in 1913 as deputy district attorney. He later became city attorney of Montrose and held the post until 1936, when he was named to the Colorado Supreme Court.

THANK YOU, thank you for the wonderful response you gave to our Anniversary. We're sorry if you didn't get an orchid in the late afternoon, but frankly, you responded in such numbers that we underestimated the amount we'd need. Since we had them flown in especially from Hawaii, we had to give roses after the orchids gave out — but next time we'll know how many of you read our column.

IVAN J. RILEY, whose stand is famous for its delicious corned beef, also has other interesting meats for weekend shoppers. Another specialty is his ready-rolled chuck roast. And of course, you may buy a wonderful rolled rib roast at this stand if you order it ahead of time. Ivan believes in rolling rib roasts to order, and he's so right.

We saw some very special spareribs at this stand too, so if you're in a mood for spareribs and sauerkraut, Ivan will fix you up.

IF YOU'RE observing Lent you're probably busy trying to think of new dishes for your family.

MAKE this savory "Scalloped Salmon with Olives" for that main hot dish you need for supper. Cooked salmon is baked in layers with a sauce, rich ripe olives, bread crumbs and cheese.

SCALLOPED SALMON WITH OLIVES

2 cups cooked salmon
½ cup ripe olives
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
1½ cups milk
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 tablespoon grated onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2 bouillon cubes
½ cup dry bread crumbs
½ cup grated American cheese

Remove skin and bones from fish. Flake fish. Cut olives from pits into large pieces. Melt butter and blend in flour. Add milk, seasonings, onion, parsley and bouillon cubes. Cook and stir until thickened. Remove bay leaf. Place layer of salmon in bottom of greased 1-quart casserole, sprinkle with olives, crumbs and cheese, and layer of sauce. Repeat until all ingredients are used, topping casserole with crumbs and cheese. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 30 minutes.

Serves 5 to 6.
